SAMPLER

Fairfax, Virginia

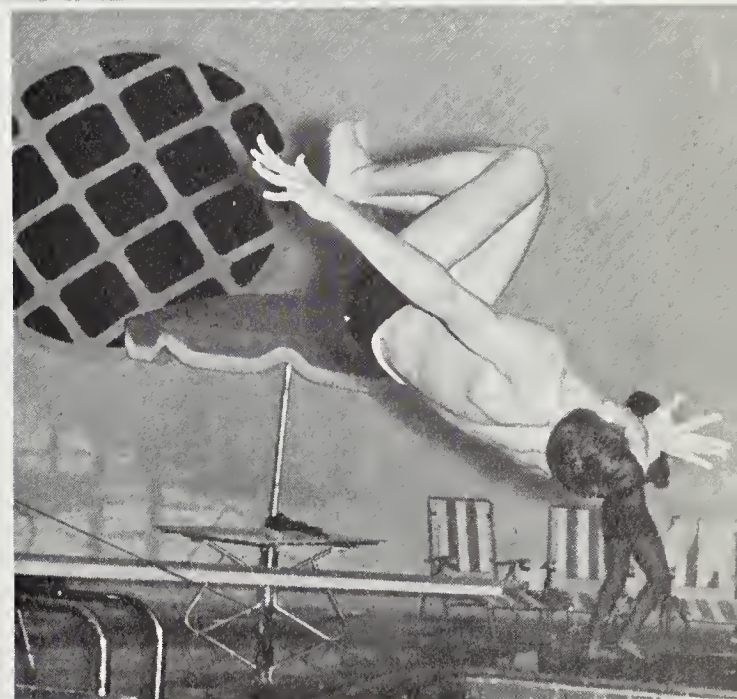

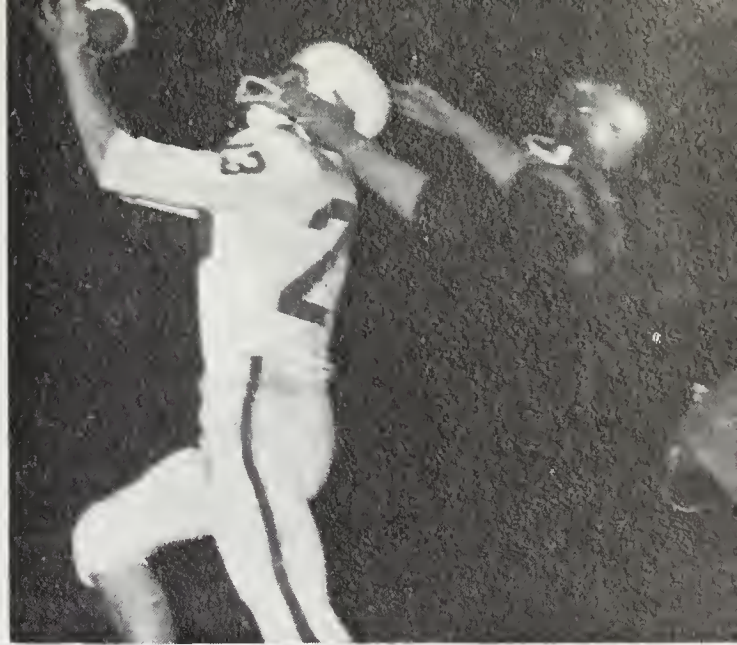

In the mind's memory the experiences of the past continually grow dim and out of focus. The events of only a few years past seem hazy and unclear. Decisions which at the time seemed so logical seem so foolish in the perspective of time. People, places and events which were so momentous in the present diminish as they drift into the past. The purpose of a year-book is to preserve the happenings of a single year from these encroachments of time and inaccuracies of memory. Now or in the future as your memories begin to fade you may recall 1963 in the Fare Fac Sampler.

Of course, every event in 1963 cannot be recorded within one book. It is more the intangible spirit which has made this year memorable that we, the staff, have tried to capture. Perhaps the picture of some unremembered event will light a candle in your memory and put 1963 into a new perspective.

To express our esteem and our gratitude we dedicate the 1963 Fare Fac Sampler to Mr. Adair R. McConnell.

- . . . For his intense personal interest in the welfare and education of every student
- . . . For his generous donation of his time beyond the requirements of classroom education in sponsorship of previous senior classes and this year's Senior Honor Society
- . . . For his understanding of students' viewpoints and problems
- . . . For his dedication to teaching

We dedicate the 1963 Fare Fac Sampler to Mr. Adair R. McConnell

ACTIVITIES

An integral part of life at Fairfax High School is the enjoyment that its traditional activities bring to us all. Drudgery and schoolwork are forgotten as we recall the highlights of the year: the pride of watching our athletic teams in action, the joy of seeing a lovely queen crowned, the thrill of having a club or class float in the Homecoming Parade, the glamour of a formal dance, the boisterous fun of the Sadie Hawkins, the accomplishment of presenting a successful play, the half-happiness, half-sorrow of graduation. Throughout the year these events kept our interest in the school alive, putting the needed variety into every day, and bringing about new friendships through association with others. We discovered new interests and broadened our outlook through active participation in such activities, thereby better preparing ourselves for the future.

The first day of school . . . fresh hopes and new teachers . . .

A tearful Peppy Rebel is crowned amidst the smiles of other candidates.

Two weeks after the beginning of school, the Fair Facts staff honored Rebel spirit by presenting the first dance of the year. The informal atmosphere of the dance made us quickly forget our disappointment over the hard-fought loss to George Washington. Anxious days of excitement and curiosity were climaxed when Betty Cinibulk and Mike Eidson were crowned Peppy and Johnny Rebel. Two new faculty members, Mr. Muhle and Mrs. Talmadge, were chosen Lord and Lady Fairfax.

Betty and Mike, the newly-crowned representatives of Rebel spirit, share a dance.

Varsity Football

Fairfax can be proud of its varsity squad this year, which in a hard-fought season, demonstrated the courage and spirit characteristic of our school. Our team displayed as penetrating an offense, and as stalwart a defense as could be expected against the tough odds we faced from the other schools in the league.

Our 3-7 record was certainly no indication of the effort put forth this season, as seen by the honors some of the team members received in the area and in the state. Ron Tankersley received All-Metropolitan, All-State, and All-American honors. After the season, Tankersley's number was retired—a great tribute to the outstanding lineman. Seven other Fairfax players won mention on All-District teams. Fairfax's backfield was led by halfback Bill Johnston, who led the team in rushing, receiving, and scoring. Guard Tankersley was awarded the Outstanding Lineman trophy, as he led his teammates with 117 tackles. The fine defensive work of sophomore Eddie Gore, with three interceptions, and the kickoff and punt returning of senior Mike Hagan served to keep the Rebels moving if Jon Schulstad's passing offensive faltered. At one point this season our team won three consecutive games with the place kicking of Senior Ike Howard proving decisive in two games. The 13-12 Homecoming victory over Mount Vernon snapped a four game losing streak and sparked the Rebels to two more victories over Falls Church, 14-0, and Hammond, 14-12, at their homecomings.

Fairfax joins in saluting the 24 seniors and Dale and Dean Weber, our manager-physicians, who will be graduating this year, and wishes Coaches Dick Claypool, Ray Peterson, and next year's squad all success.

Behind the coaching of Jack Cassidy and the hard work of the whole team, the Junior Varsity Squad had a very successful season with a 5-2-1 record. Many of the boys on this year's team showed great promise for the future and some were even brought up to the Varsity at the season's end.

Quarterback Steve Hilley led the Rebels to four early season victories, three of them shutouts, before being stopped by Mount Vernon in a close 18-13 loss. Fairfax then moved on to another 13-0 shutout over Madison, but lost to a tough Groveton team, 7-6. In the last game of the season, the Rebels battled to a 6-6 tie with Annandale to complete a victorious season for Coach Cassidy in his first year of coaching at Fairfax.

Outstanding for the J.V.'s this season were tri-captains Dave Manlove, Steve LaSalle, and Bill Morey. Because of the work of these boys and many others, the varsity coaches are eagerly anticipating next year's season.

Coaches Mason and DiGiosia give a few pointers to freshman team captain, Jimmy Lonergan.

This year's freshman squad made an excellent showing in their first year at Fairfax with an undefeated 5-0 season. This fine display of football proved an inspiration to the varsity and junior varsity coaches, who were losing many of their players because of graduation and promotion to the varsity. Showing the results of excellent coaching by Mike Mason and Vic DiGiosia, the Frosh squad, led by quarterback Jimmy Lonergan, scored victories over Mount Vernon, Lee, J.E.B. Stuart, Madison, and Groveton. The defense is to be commended on its excellent job in holding opponents to only three touchdowns all season, while the offense scored thirteen touchdowns and a total of 87 points. The co-captains of the freshman team were Jimmy Lonergan and Danny Allen, both of whom show excellent promise for the future.

The long-awaited Homecoming activities were suddenly upon us and we hurried to finish our floats in time for the game. As the Class of '63 completed months of preparation for the biggest and most elaborate Homecoming ever, photographers busily readied their cameras to capture the highlights of the festivities. Thursday night a rousing bonfire was held, followed Friday evening by the Key Club Barbecue. Friday night the football team rewarded our spirit and enthusiasm with a thrilling victory over Mt. Vernon. At half-time Judy Jones was crowned Homecoming Queen and mounted her float to begin her reign. Colorful floats made by various school organizations and classes, and carrying out this year's theme, "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny," circled the field in competition for the coveted float prize, finally awarded to the proud Keyette Club. The next day the floats, the football team, the cheerleaders, the Homecoming Court, and the band and drill team participated in a parade through Fairfax. That evening, a "Coke-tail Hour" highlighted by a night-club review, preceded the Homecoming dance, during which Judy was presented with a football signed by all the team members. As the 1962 Homecoming drew to a close, we felt great satisfaction in having presented an accurate picture of our spirit and achievement to the new faculty members and to the returning alumni.

Led by three returning lettermen, the varsity hockey team had one of the most successful seasons in recent years. Losing only to Annandale, the team compiled an excellent 4-1-2 record. Teamwork and determination were the keys to the successes of the season. Daily practices on the hockey field after school were well-rewarded with victories over Stuart, Lee, Edison, and Woodson. Two fiercely contested games ended in ties—Osborn and Madison. The loss of senior tri-captains Margaret Owens, Janet Beach and Tina White will be greatly felt next year, but Miss Skinner has many outstanding prospects from which to build a new squad.

The Junior Varsity hockey team followed in the Varsity's footsteps with an equally successful season and a record of four wins and one loss. Under the leadership of Coach Davis, the squad progressed rapidly from a group of inexperienced players to a smoothly working team. After the initial loss to Lee, the team was undefeated and unscored upon in its last four games. Although the schedule was shorter than the varsity's and the games were sometimes called because of darkness, the team developed many prospects to replace the graduating varsity players.

Dennis Hanrahan seems to be a happy man after being caught and dragged to the dance by Carolyn Masters.

A quick change of scenery was afforded as the traditional Sadie Hawkins Dance got under way. Preparations for the big event had begun weeks in advance as aspiring Daisy Maes planned costumes and asked dates. On the night of the dance, usually tidy, normal individuals found themselves bedecked in burlap and straw hats and munching on vegetable corsages. The gym had been skillfully transformed into the bustling hillbilly community of Dogpatch by a busy newspaper staff, and provided a perfect setting for the wild antics that followed. Suddenly aggressive girls began using all their feminine wiles to get their men up before Marryin' Sam to be hitched. All too soon the evening was over, and tired Dogpatchers regained their usual composure and reluctantly returned to a normal life.

The glow of colored footlights, the expectant murmur of the audience, the trembling fingers flipping quickly through the script for a last hurried glance, the sudden hush as the houselights dim and the curtains open—these are but a few of the memories that the class of '64 will carry with them in the years to come. Besides the thrill of performance, the Juniors will remember the hours of set construction and tiring rehearsals that went into their production. The cast members will recall their many frustrations and misgivings as they learned to accept frequent criticism and attempted again and again to perfect a single line or gesture. But above all is the recollection of the pride of their successful presentation of "More Than Meets the Eye." The junior play besides being the highlight of the early winter season, is an important factor in uniting the entire Junior class in the accomplishment of a single important goal.

Sno-Ball

A heavy blanket of snow helped set the mood of year's first formal dance, the Sno-ball. Amidst the glittering ornaments and snow-covered Christmas trees which carried out the theme, "Enchantment on Ice," couples danced to the soft music of the Note-worthies, expectantly awaiting the presentation of the court and the crowning of the Sno-ball queen, Elly Jean Stuart. Sponsored by the Choral Department, the Sno-ball provided a perfect beginning for the long-awaited Christmas Holidays.

This year's unsuccessful wrestling season can basically be attributed to a lack of depth in all weight classes. Despite the poor overall record, the season was valuable as a foundation for next year and gave many underclassmen useful experience. Although the team did not do well as a whole, there were two outstanding wrestlers this year, John Shreves and Roger Latham. Latham had a record of 8-2 in the 168 pound class, while Shreves at 118 pounds posted a 7-1-1 record. John placed second in the Northern Virginia Tournament, and was Fairfax's only man to reach the State Tournament, where he placed fifth. Coach Vic Digiosia envisions a good season next year with many boys showing great potential not only for the Varsity but for the J.V. team. Although Tom Carver, John Shreves, Eric Magnusson, and Roger Latham will be graduating, the coach is counting especially on Willy Mangler, Bob Beckwith, Ray Diamant, and Scott Latham to strengthen the team.

This year's Varsity basketball season was one of exciting upsets and bitter disappointments. From the opening tap-off of the Woodson game to the final buzzer of the play-off game with McLean, the season was highlighted by the tremendous spirit, sportsmanship, and skill expected of our team.

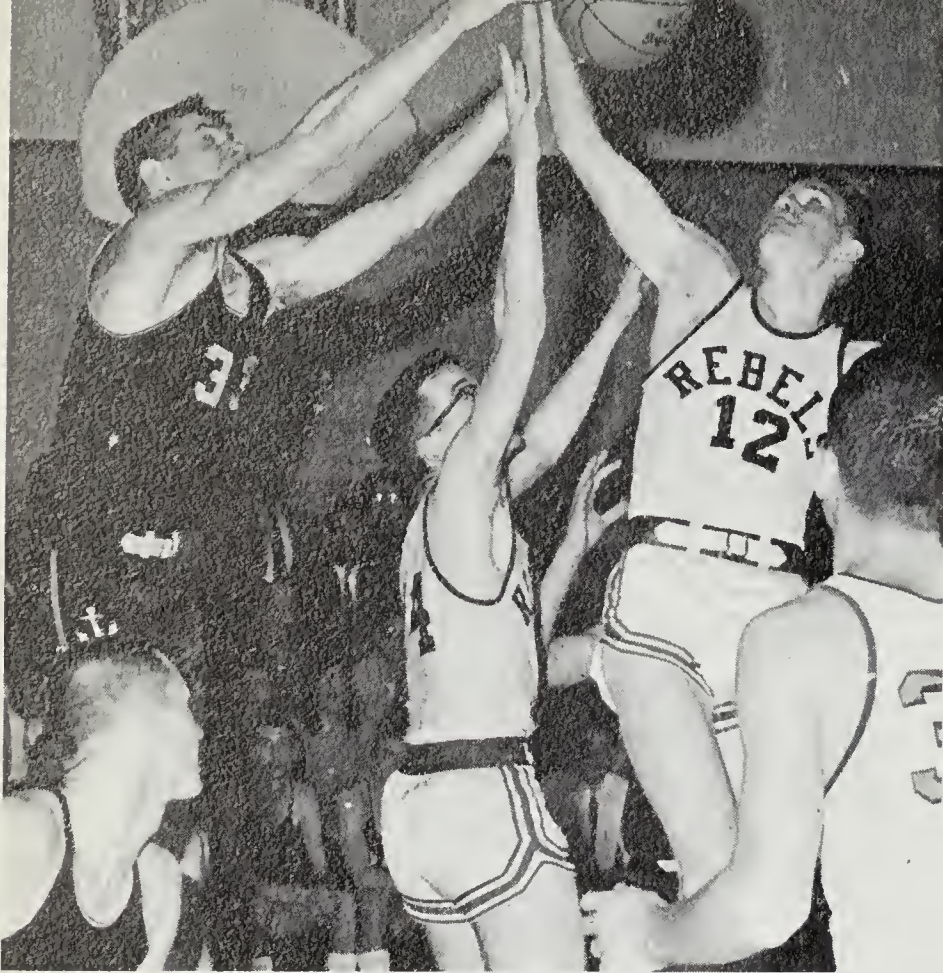

Paced all season by the fine outside shooting of Ray Burch and Ed Lonergan, and the rebounding of Scott Huntley and Jon Schulstad, the Rebel team completed its season with an even nine wins and nine losses. The Rebel five played its best games against the toughest teams and in two games pulled big upsets over Yorktown, 51-49, and G.W., 62-61. The win over G.W. was especially satisfying to Coach Frank Ferguson, since it marked the 100th basketball victory of his coaching career. After smashing Falls Church 83-66, the Rebels needed a playoff victory over McLean for a tournament berth, but lost to the hot-shooting Highlanders, 78-53.

The Rebels suffered a mid-season loss due to the illness of Bob Fagan, but the other members of the team came through to take up the slack. Fairfax will be losing four seniors from the team, Ed Lonergan, Bill Johnston, Ray Burch, and Jon Schulstad, but with a solid nucleus of height and experience returning, the Rebels may expect an excellent season next year.

Plagued all year by poor shooting, the Junior Varsity team completed their season with a record of eight wins and eleven losses. Although the team's overall shooting percentage was below 30%, several team members compiled fine averages. Elroy Worsham, with an 11 point average, and Jimmy Lonergan with 10 points per game, led the team. At the season's end both boys were brought up to the varsity. Leading the team in rebounds were Early Davis with 108 and Ted Jensen with 97. The J.V. squad did exceptionally well at the free-throw line where they made 210 points for a 66% completion average. Although the team was hurt by inexperience and a lack of height, Coach Jack Cassidy succeeded in preparing several future varsity prospects.

The Freshman Basketball team got off to a poor start this year, but improved by winning three of their last four games to complete a 4-7 season. Lacking height and a great scoring potential due to the loss of Jimmy Lonergan to the J.V., the squad had a hard time with the taller, stronger teams throughout Northern Virginia.

Steve Taylor, Larry Robertson, and John Fletcher were outstanding for the team in all-around play. Although the team did not post a winning season, it afforded many boys on the team the opportunity to develop themselves and to gain experience for future play on Varsity and J.V. teams.

Band, and the second of our winter dances, the Sweetheart was the result of months of extensive preparation which was climaxed in a single night of soft lights, gentle music, and romance. As Terry Byers and Carolyn Masters were crowned King and Queen of Hearts, we began to form warm memories of an evening filled with moonlight and roses.

Although the team's won-lost scoreboard was not impressive, the season's record extends much further. Under the coaching of Miss Davis, the team developed into a closely knit unit using teamwork rather than individual effort alone. Co-captains Gail Newman and Janis Conerly kept the girls organized and helped to instill the never-give-up spirit for which the team was noted. Individually the fine offensive work of Jenny Mercader and Tina White and, the defensive efforts of Sue Post and Janis Conerly sparked the team. Gail Newman also did an excellent job as the roving guard, a position newly added to the game. Even though the team will lose over half its members by graduation, the returning nucleus of underclassmen promises an excellent season next year.

This year's Junior Varsity squad made quite a name for itself finishing the season with a 7-2 record. Coached by Miss Coleman, the girls were not only outstanding for their basketball talents but also for their sportsmanship and conduct. Although their inexperience was evident at first, the girls were soon able to begin working as a team, and by the season's end had greatly developed their skills and mastered the basic fundamentals completely. This invaluable preparation will undoubtedly be evident in next year's Varsity team. Individuals for whom the coaches have great hopes are Trice Coleman, Cindy Davis, and Jody Trammell.

Track

Jon Wooten carries the baton for Fairfax as he runs third in the mile relays.

This year's track team, although seriously lacking in depth and sufficient practice facilities, completed a fairly successful season. Having lost many promising young trackmen to the new W. T. Woodson High School, the team lacked the overall ability to win consistently as a team.

Seniors Jay Whitman, a high jumper, and Dwight Wooster, a miler, were outstanding individually. Both were impressive in early meets with Whitman breaking the school high jump record in the second meet of the season. Whitman's leap of 5' 10 1/2" assured him a chance to compete in the state meet in May.

Senior Play

Albert, played by Jim Smith, smiles with embarrassment as he tries to remember his lines.

In late December controversy divided the senior as seniors debated the possibility of presenting the school's first musical comedy in place of the traditional dramatic Senior Play. Finally it was put to a vote and decided—in mid-May the Senior Class would sponsor "Bye Bye Birdie," a musical in which, for the first time, underclassmen would be allowed to participate. Tryouts began in January, with aspiring singers, actors and dancers waiting nervously until the final cast was announced. The long, diligent rehearsals began, either in the afternoon or at night in the auditorium. May approached rapidly, with tension and apprehension mounting steadily as cast members memorized their lines, music and dances. The seemingly endless hammering of set construction echoed in an auditorium soon to be filled with an estimated twenty-five hundred viewers. Slowly, the musical began to take form, as Mr. Wygal taught the chorus how to swing with a syncopated rhythm, and the principals, under the direction of Miss Williamson, learned how to put their lines across effectively. The unforeseen obstacles, numerous delays, and last-minute stage fright, all were forgotten with the sound of the delighted and appreciative laughter of the audience, as "Bye Bye Birdie" was successfully presented, thereby breaching an old tradition and perhaps initiating a new one.

"Spanish Rose" played by Ellie Stuart, rehearses her opening number "English Teacher."

Director, Miss Williamson, gives Kim, played by Elinore Mundy, a few pointers on motions as she practices the first act.

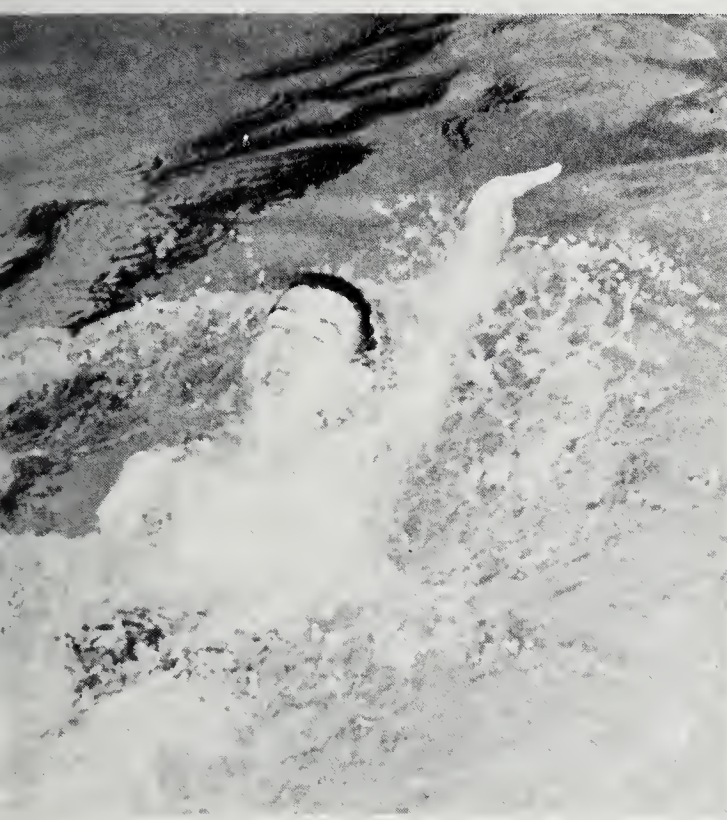

Members of Conrad Birdie's fan club, Carol Fox, Kathy Coffey, Elinore Mundy, Jo Hoffman, and Jackie Lambert, swoon as Birdie, played by Bill Johnston, serenades them.

The turnout this year for the swimming team, newly formed under the organization of senior Craig Silverthorne, was tremendous. The team practiced every Monday night at Starlit Fairways' indoor pool. The best swimmers were entered in competition against other clubs in the area and each member, whether entered competitively or not, practiced various kicks, strokes, and methods of breathing. Relays were run to get the members into shape and to clock individual times.

Some of the outstanding swimmers were: backstroke, Van Maeger; breaststroke, Bo King; butterfly, Craig Silverthorne; free style, Craig Silverthorne; and diving, John Applequist and Chuck Parcelles.

Craig does a flip as he practices in the new pool for the diving team try-outs.

	26	Falls Church	Westwood
	29	McLean	Courthouse
May	6	Madison	Westwood
	13	Playoff's

Strengthened by the addition of four new linksmen, this year's golf team is expected to retain its Group 1-A championship and present a strong bid for the Northern Virginia and State championships won last year by the Stuart Raiders. To stimulate intrasquad competition, Coach Frank Ferguson decided to eliminate the traditional golf ladder and thus expose the top six men to challenge matches with the other members of the team.

Returning lettermen Bill Cason and Bob Barnes, and sophomores Jeff Marsh and Jim Sale, provided a strong basis for the team. The new members, Ronnie and Richard Bradley from Germany, and John and Dick Fisher, transfers from Falls Church, provided the depth essential to making Fairfax one of the top golf teams in the area.

Bill Cason helps the wind along, but fails to sink his putt for a seventy on the front nine.

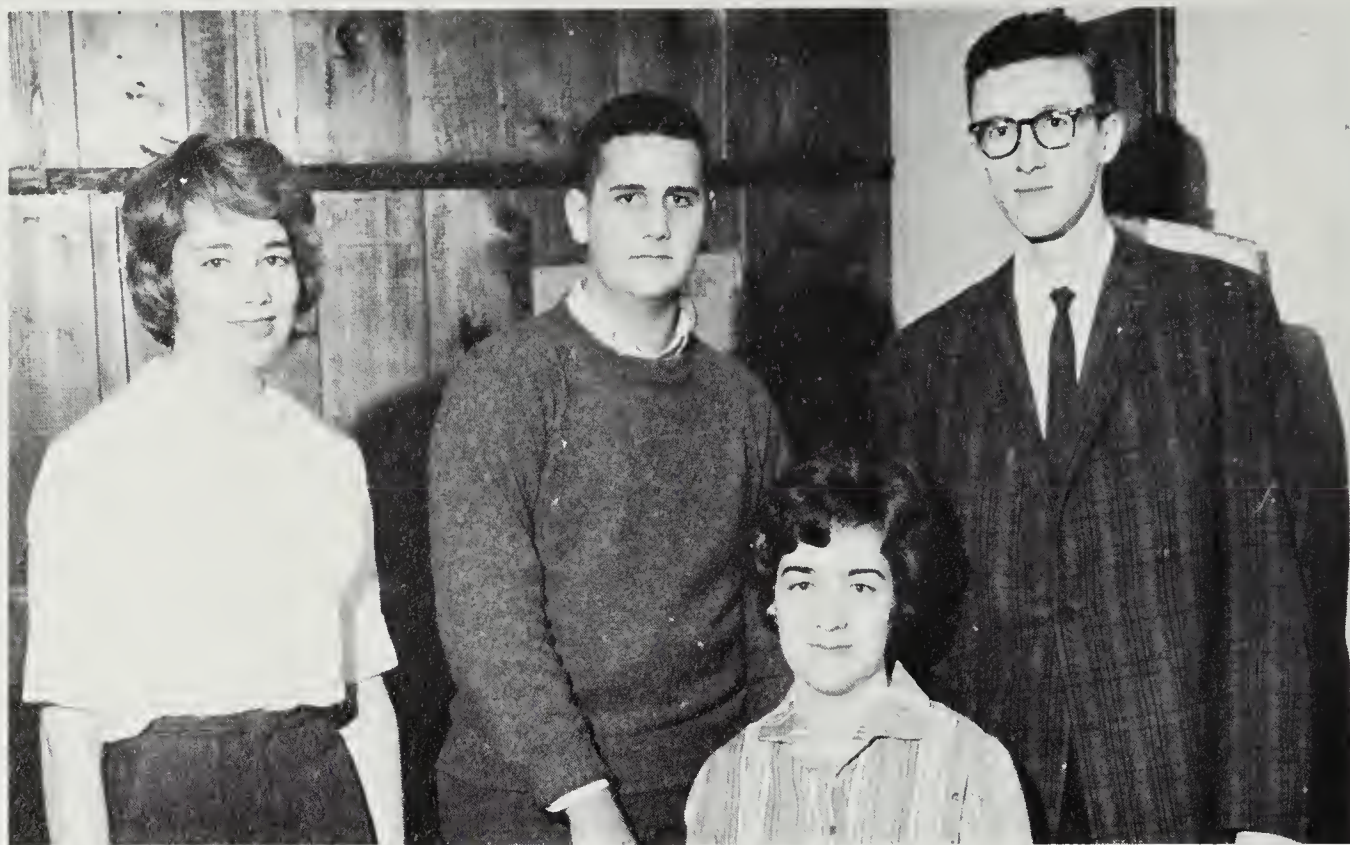

ORGANIZATIONS

The spirit which makes F.H.S. what it is may be observed in any of the school's activities, from pep rallies to school work, but it is nowhere greater than in the clubs and organizations of the school. Through these activities, students have the opportunity to supplement their education, to make new friends, or simply to have a good time. Besides providing an outlet for the interests and talents of the students, the organizations accomplished many worthwhile projects within the school. The choir and band presented semi-formal winter dances—the highlights of the winter season. Student Government's endeavors not only achieved many valuable goals, but united the entire school in the accomplishment of these projects. In all of these activities, it was the spirit and enthusiasm of the students which made them successful. The organizations are constant proof that an individual's education at F.H.S. is not limited to the classroom but is the result as well, of his participation in extra-curricular activities.

This year, through strong and imaginative leadership, Student Government sought to unify the school behind common goals, and to maintain the spirit and atmosphere so essential to Fairfax High. Beginning even before school started, the officers and cabinet members carefully organized their plans for the important S.G. projects including the Welfare Drive, the Leadership Training Conference, Citizenship Week, and International Week. At the beginning of school came hurried meetings and preparations concerning the Speaker's Bureau, the monitor system, and the weekly printing of the "Who-What-Where-When" bulletin. Two long planned goals, the revision of the point-card system, and the publication of the student handbook were realized early in the fall. The second semester brought initial preparations for the coming year and the organization of S.G. elections. Keeping in mind the high standards of past years, students were reminded of the importance of selecting responsible and intelligent leadership for 1963-1964.

Quill and Scroll

The purposes of the Quill and Scroll Society are to instill in students the ideal of scholarship, to advance the standard of journalism by developing better journalists and by bringing forth a higher code of ethics, to promote exact and dispassionate thinking, and clear and forceful writing. The Virgil Carrington Jones Chapter of the society held two inductions this year, recognizing those students and faculty members doing superior work in high school journalism. Among the various activities of the Quill and Scroll were sponsoring—within the school—National Newspaper Week, the National Writing Contest, and the Current Events Quiz. President Janet Gould also awarded honor certificates to those students, ineligible for membership, who demonstrated superior literary work.

Chess Club

A sincere interest in chess was the only requirement for membership in the Chess Club. Novice players were welcomed into the group, and under the guidance of more experienced members, quickly became familiar with the stratagems of chess playing. The increased competition with other schools made contention for top spots within the club more contested, and practice sessions became more frequent. Controversies over technicalities grew more heated as members became more skilled in clever, complicated tactics, and increased their understanding of the game of chess.

Fare Fac Sampler

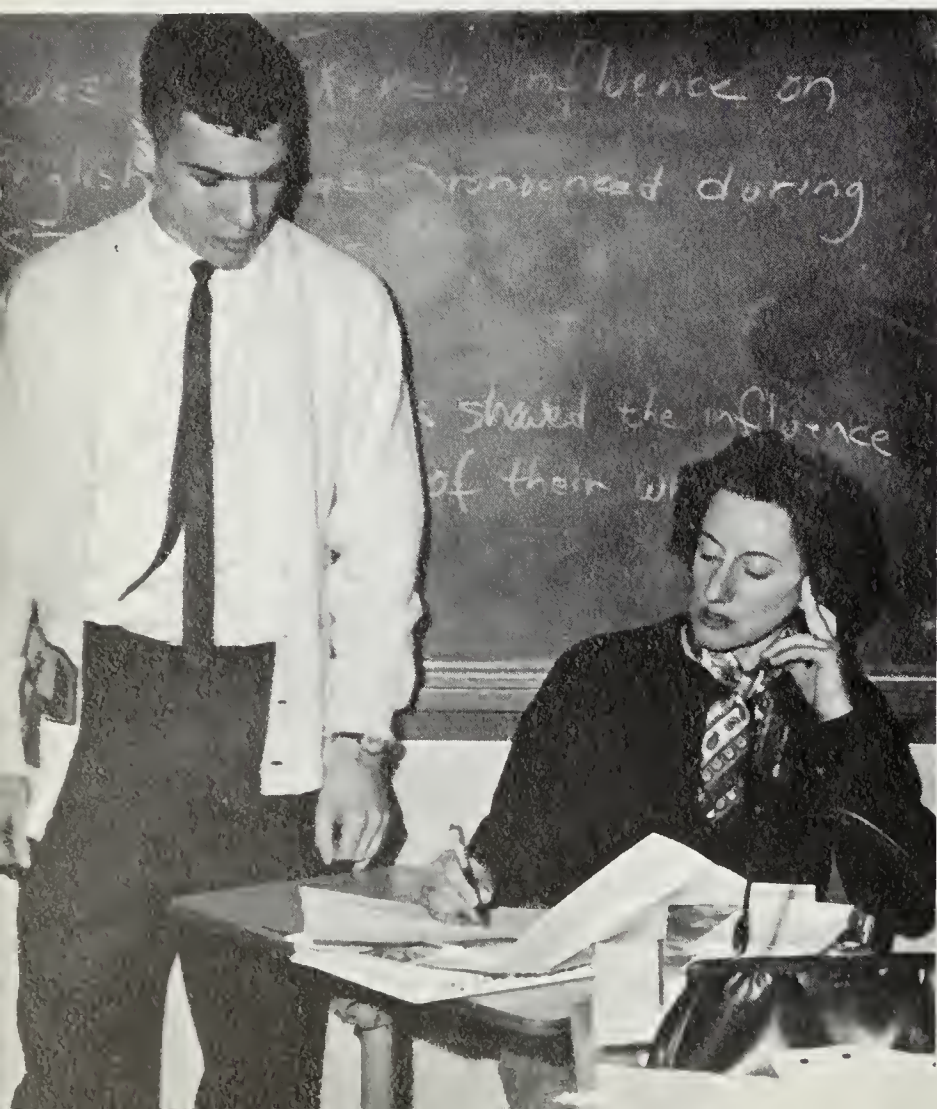

B. J. Lubin and Nikki Meith try to decide on lay-out for the new Winter divider.

At the beginning of the year, the members of the Sampler staff were confronted with the seemingly impossible task of producing an entire yearbook. For the first few weeks the experienced staff members had the job of teaching the new staff how to write copy, set up pictures, and arrange schedules. Among the first duties of a staff were soliciting ads, selecting a cover, selling subscriptions, and consulting the layout book to determine what copy was to be written and what pictures were to be taken. Busy photographers attended every school function hoping to catch a particularly interesting candid shot. Other staff members wrote copy, captioned pictures, and racked their brains for original ideas for action shots. As deadlines neared, last-minute adjustments extended seventh period late into the afternoon for many of the staff members. Even after the initial work was completed, proofreading, re-writing, and correcting were still necessary. Finally came the thrill of that long awaited day in June when the 1963 Sampler was presented to the school.

Fair Facts

Like other publications of Fairfax, the newspaper attempted to change and improve its organization this year. With the help of its sponsor, Mrs. Watkins, the editors re-organized the staff. By creating new positions and eliminating others, the work was distributed more evenly, and younger staff members were given more responsibility to prepare them for future years. Laying out the paper, writing stories, and editing copy were not the only duties of the Fair Facts staff. Besides the necessary jobs of selling subscriptions and soliciting ads, the newspaper presented two of the year's social highlights, the Peppy and Johnny and Sadie Hawkins Dances.

At the beginning of the year, the staff of the literary magazine was challenged by their new sponsor, Mr. Rinaldo, to produce an entirely revised and original magazine. Under the editorship of Steve Mitchell, the staff concentrated on reaching this goal. They began by choosing a new name, cover, and layout. These preliminaries were followed by the less exciting work of soliciting subscriptions, reading stories submitted, proofreading, and selling paperbacks to raise money. With the first issue of Matrix, it was clear that the staff had fulfilled Mr. Rinaldo's challenge—Matrix was a stimulating and original product of Fairfax's creative students.

Car Club

One of the newer clubs at Fairfax this year was the Car Club. Dan Cupp was elected as the club's first president, and Alan Beard, vice-president. Among the aims of the "Rollin' Rebels" was the promotion of safe driving, a more thorough understanding of car operation, and maintenance of automobiles. Several cars were donated to the Car Club, among these were a '38 Ford and a '52 Ford pick-up which the active members immediately undertook to renovate. This year was very successful for this new club. A large number of students, both boys and girls, demonstrated interest in such a unique organization.

Car Club Officers: Kevin Williams, Jack Robinson, Danny Cupp.

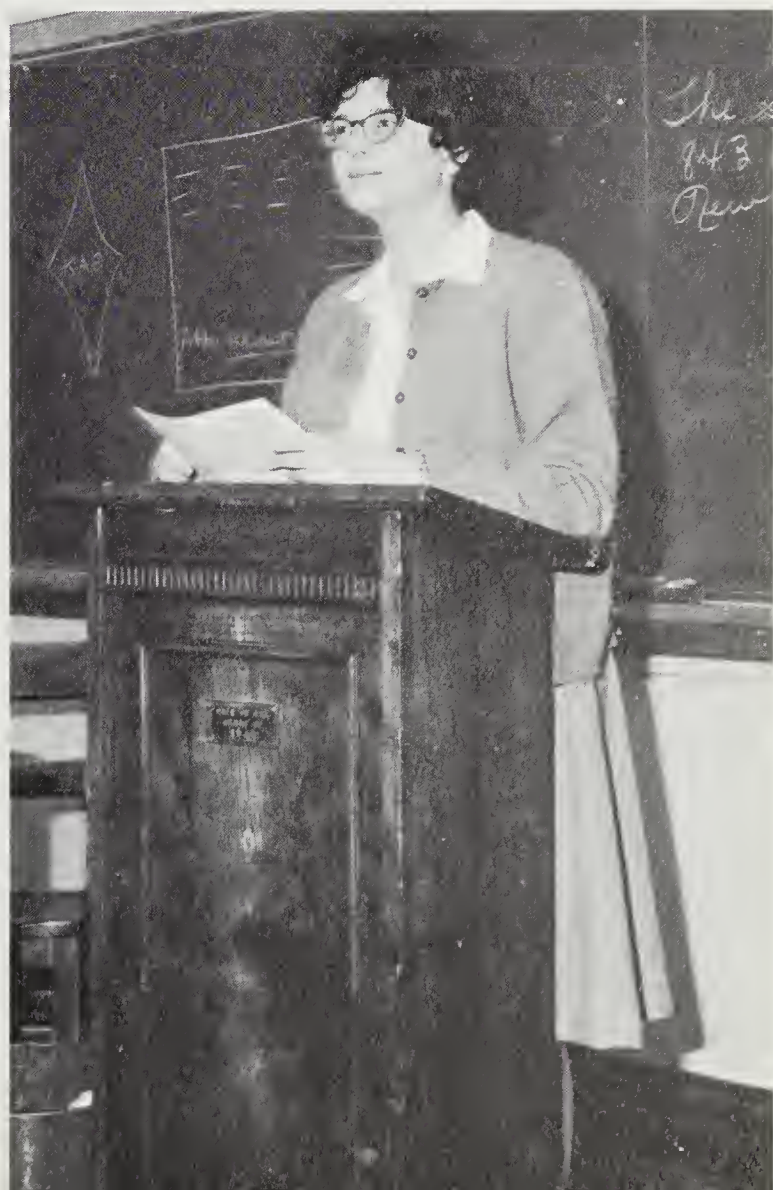

Debate Club

Although the perfection of formal debating techniques was the goal of the Debate Club, anyone who enjoyed arguing was welcomed. Mrs. Talmadge, the new sponsor, helped to plan the many activities of the club, including an extended debating schedule and field trips to see college debaters. The experience of having to think quickly and speak clearly helped members to gain the poise and confidence useful in any situation.

Debate Club Officers: Bob Dillon, Regina Peterson, Karen Levins.

Junior Honor Society member, Jo Hoffmann, helps Senior Honor Society members, David Wise and Bonnie Biggs, with the annual Christmas Card Drive.

Despite its few members, the Junior Honor Society, an organization for underclassmen patterned after the Senior Honor Society, worked hard to support its own and the senior club's activities. The club's assistance to the Senior Honor Society in the Christmas card sale and the Easter Assembly made these projects more successful. The organizations profits from its own fund-raising projects were donated to worthwhile causes, such as Senior Honor Society scholarships and the exchange student program. As a group of superior academic students, the society set high standards for the members to live up to. At March inductions, new members were called upon to uphold these standards and to devote their efforts to the activities of the society.

The National Honor Society, a select group of juniors and seniors chosen for their scholarship, leadership, character, and service, was one of the most helpful organizations in the school. At their induction members pledged to uphold the high ideals of the society and the school. This brought them the responsibility of setting an example to the rest of the school. The major project of the society during the year was its Christmas card sale. Sponsored to raise money for scholarships for worthy seniors, the project was an outstanding success due to the enthusiastic efforts of all the members. The club also presented the Easter religious assembly and helped the dramatics class to put on the Christmas tableaux. During Citizenship week the society assisted Mr. McConnell in his talk on personal appearance by dramatizing his speech with several skits. One of the most valuable projects undertaken by the organization was its tutoring service in which society members gave help to any students who requested it. These many activities made the Honor Society one of the most worthwhile activities in the school.

Led by captain Betty Cinibulk, this year's varsity cheerleaders sparked school spirit to new heights. From the close of summer, they worked diligently preparing pom-poms, megaphones, and new cheers for the first game. Throughout the football season, they led spirited Rebel cheers at bonfires, pep rallies, cavalcades, and games. Hours of practice and planning resulted in clever skits at pep rallies, new basketball uniforms, and the initiation of a new style of cheering. Drizzling rain and bitter cold never dampened the enthusiasm of the squad and their example kindled the spirits of the entire school. They cheered through soaring victories and discouraging defeats, from the first thrilling moment of the W-L game to the final buzzer of the last basketball game. Their constant efforts to promote spirit and sportsmanship succeeded in building support for Rebel teams to an all-time high.

The spirited Junior Varsity cheerleaders proudly led their teams through successful football and basketball seasons. Their hard work and practice was rewarded by the team's thrilling victories and the ardent support of Rebel fans. They introduced several new cheers and were always on hand to boost team morale. At the end of the basketball season, the J.V. cheerleaders could look back proudly on a successful year and forward hopefully to their varsity year ahead.

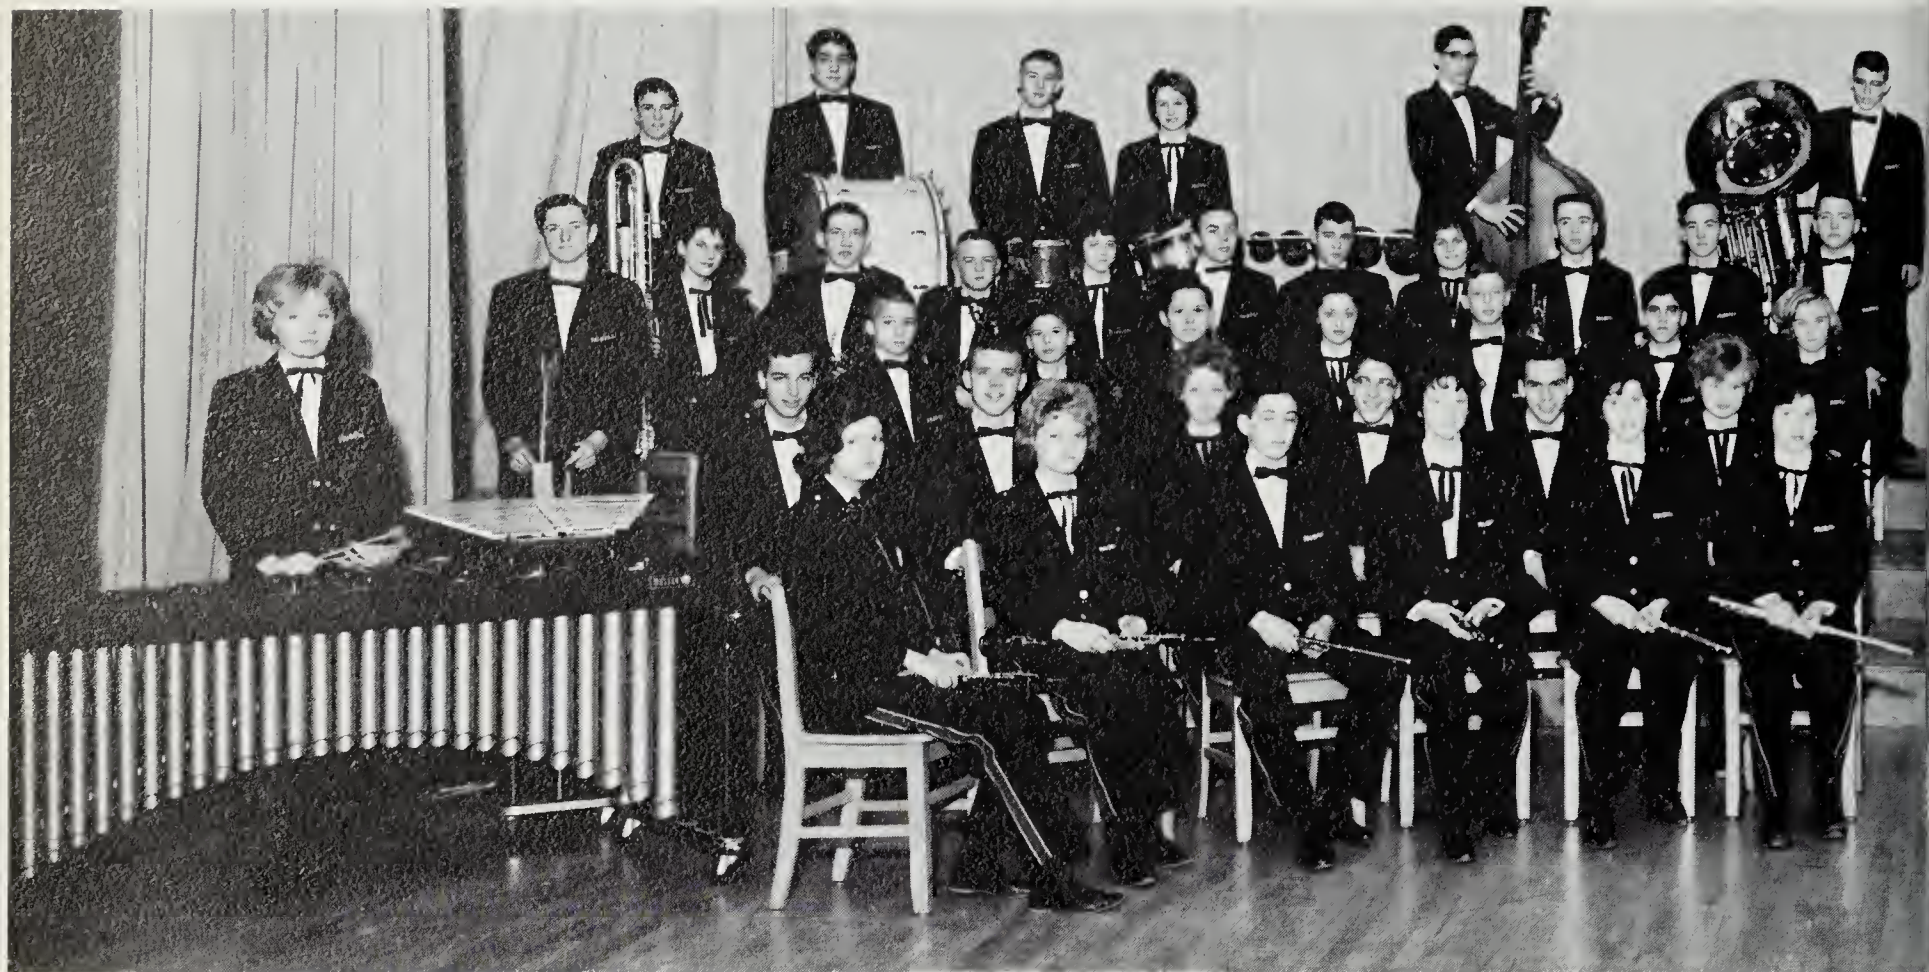

The Freshmen cheerleaders quickly overcame the problems of late tryouts and organized themselves into a unified and active squad. They cheered their teams to an undefeated football season and a very successful basketball season. After learning a few basic cheers, they took the initiative and made up a few of their own. The Freshmen succeeded in making the year more than just a training period, and through hours of practice they became accomplished cheerleaders.

One of the most vital organizations at FHS, the band worked hard and unselfishly throughout the school year for the benefit of the school. A month before school opened, members practiced basic marching drills under the direction of drum major Rick Greene, and director Mr. Fuller. When the football season began, the band, accompanied by the Majorettes and Drill Team, sparked Rebel spirit during the games and entertained spectators at half-time with their polished performances.

Winter brought the concert season. The band put away its martial music and settled down to play more intricate, difficult melodies. The festive music of the annual Winter Concert helped set a gay holiday atmosphere. February was one of the busiest months for the Band. Twelve talented members represented Fairfax in the All-State Band at Annandale. In the District Festival, the Band again attained a I rating in competition with other bands from the Northern Virginia area. In February, the Band presented a jazz concert featuring Count Basie's Orchestra. One of the most memorable evenings of the year was brought about when the Band put on the Sweetheart Dance.

In the spring, the Band spent two days in diligent practice before giving the annual Clinic Concert. The Spring Concert, and playing for graduation, climaxed a year in which the Band maintained its tradition of superior music and boundless spirit.

Majorettes

FHS Majorettes: Judy Jones, Christine Swart, Carla Cleland, Carol Covell, Diane Robertson.

With their batons shining in the bright lights and in their flashy new uniforms, the Majorettes were a perfect complement to the marching band. They delighted football fans with expert half-time shows and added to the appearance of the band during parades. In addition to marching with the band, they served as ushers at concerts throughout the year. This year the majorettes added a mascot to their organization and drafted a new constitution for future majorette corps. As in the past, the majorettes helped to set an example of the spirit of FHS.

Rebelettes

With the entertainment of football spectators as their goal, the Rebelettes began practicing late in summer for their fall activities. From a disorganized group, the girls progressed to a precision drill team executing difficult maneuvers. The long hours of individual practice and the Thursday night rehearsals with the band combined to make half-time shows enjoyable for everyone. Besides their half-time shows, the team marched with the band in parades lending a finishing touch to the appearance of the group. The Rebelettes, a unique organization among the schools of the area, were a devoted group whose efforts were well appreciated.

The FHS Rebelettes march to the music of the band and add a bit of color to the Homecoming Parade.

The Girls' Chorus, a musical organization which prepared girls for Senior Choir, attained a superior level of musicianship this year. The girls' hard practices gradually increased their singing skills, and under Mr. Wygal's direction, they began to sing as an ensemble rather than as individuals. Performances at the Christmas and Spring Concerts were proof of their increasing proficiency. The group's participation in the Choral Festival in March provided the girls with invaluable experience—a foundation for their future years in Senior Choir.

Boys' Chorus

Although the scarcity of boys in the Senior Choir made the Boys' Chorus smaller than usual this year, the chorus was able to become an excellent musical ensemble. Since most of the members knew little about music at the beginning of the year, Mr. Wygal had the job of teaching them the fundamentals of proper breathing, pronunciation, and pitch control. As the boys became more skilled, the sound of the chorus improved. The boys' chorus prepared many voices which would form the backbone of future choirs.

Through many media, from concerts to radio, the Senior Choir demonstrated to the school and to the community an outstanding musical ability based on months of determined practice. Throughout the early part of the year, the choir gained valuable experience and increased its musical proficiency in various performances culminating in the beautiful Christmas Concert. In the weeks before Christmas, the members of the choir directed their enthusiasm to other than musical endeavors, as they contributed their time and energy in presenting the Sno-Ball Dance. Then, as the new year began, the choir started to prepare seriously for the Spring Choral Festival. Diligent practices were well rewarded by the superior rating the group received. Later in the spring, the choir gave invaluable assistance to the Senior Class production, the musical "Bye Bye Birdie." This year the choir endeavored to maintain the standard of excellence set by past choirs. Under the guidance of Mr. Wygal, they learned the art of self-evaluation which gave them the polished quality of an experienced and exacting musical organization.

Mr. Wygal takes time out from singing to work on another hobby with help from yearbook photographer, Bud Jones.

The Geology Club, although one of the smaller clubs in the school, was certainly one of the most industrious. Its main objective this year was a geographical survey of the Fairfax area, a project sponsored for the Junior Academy of Sciences. Under the leadership of Mrs. Banks, sponsor, the club was divided into four sections to investigate specific categories of the project. Committees were assigned to determine the water resources, the fossil background, and the mineral content of the area and to draw a topographical map of it. The club planned to finish the undertaking sometime next year and then to report its results to the community. This project was one of the most worthwhile goals attempted by a club this year and was certainly a credit to Fairfax High School.

Senior Science Club

For those whose interest in science extended deeper than the material offered in the curriculum, the Senior Science Club opened new horizons for study. In monthly meetings, the club members discussed individual science projects and laid plans for the club's major project of the year, the School Science Fair. By encouraging entries from all science students, and by advising each other on individual undertakings, the club made the fair a great success. Besides sponsoring the fair, most of the club's members assisted students and teachers as lab assistants in science courses.

Biology Club

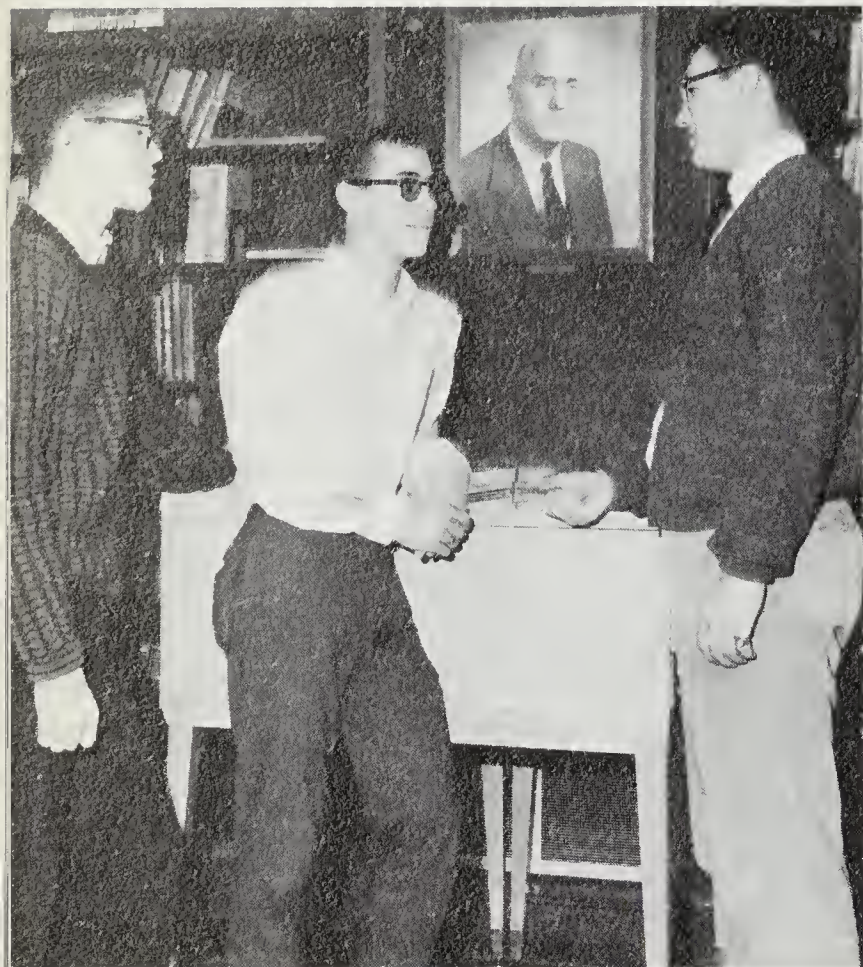

Mrs. Franks distributes worms to club members for use in their projects.

Although the members came from many classes, they all shared an interest in biology, whether a desire for a career or simply an urge to understand nature. The members met after school in the biology room to work on individual and club projects. This year the club sponsored two group projects. One was a field study of the types of micro-organisms in a local pond, the other a research project on the evolution of the phylum Lingula. These projects increased the members understanding of all the aspects of biology and made nature more interesting for each of them.

Biology Club Officers: Regina Peterson, Barbara Shelton, Judy Taylor, Sandy Pearson.

Key Club

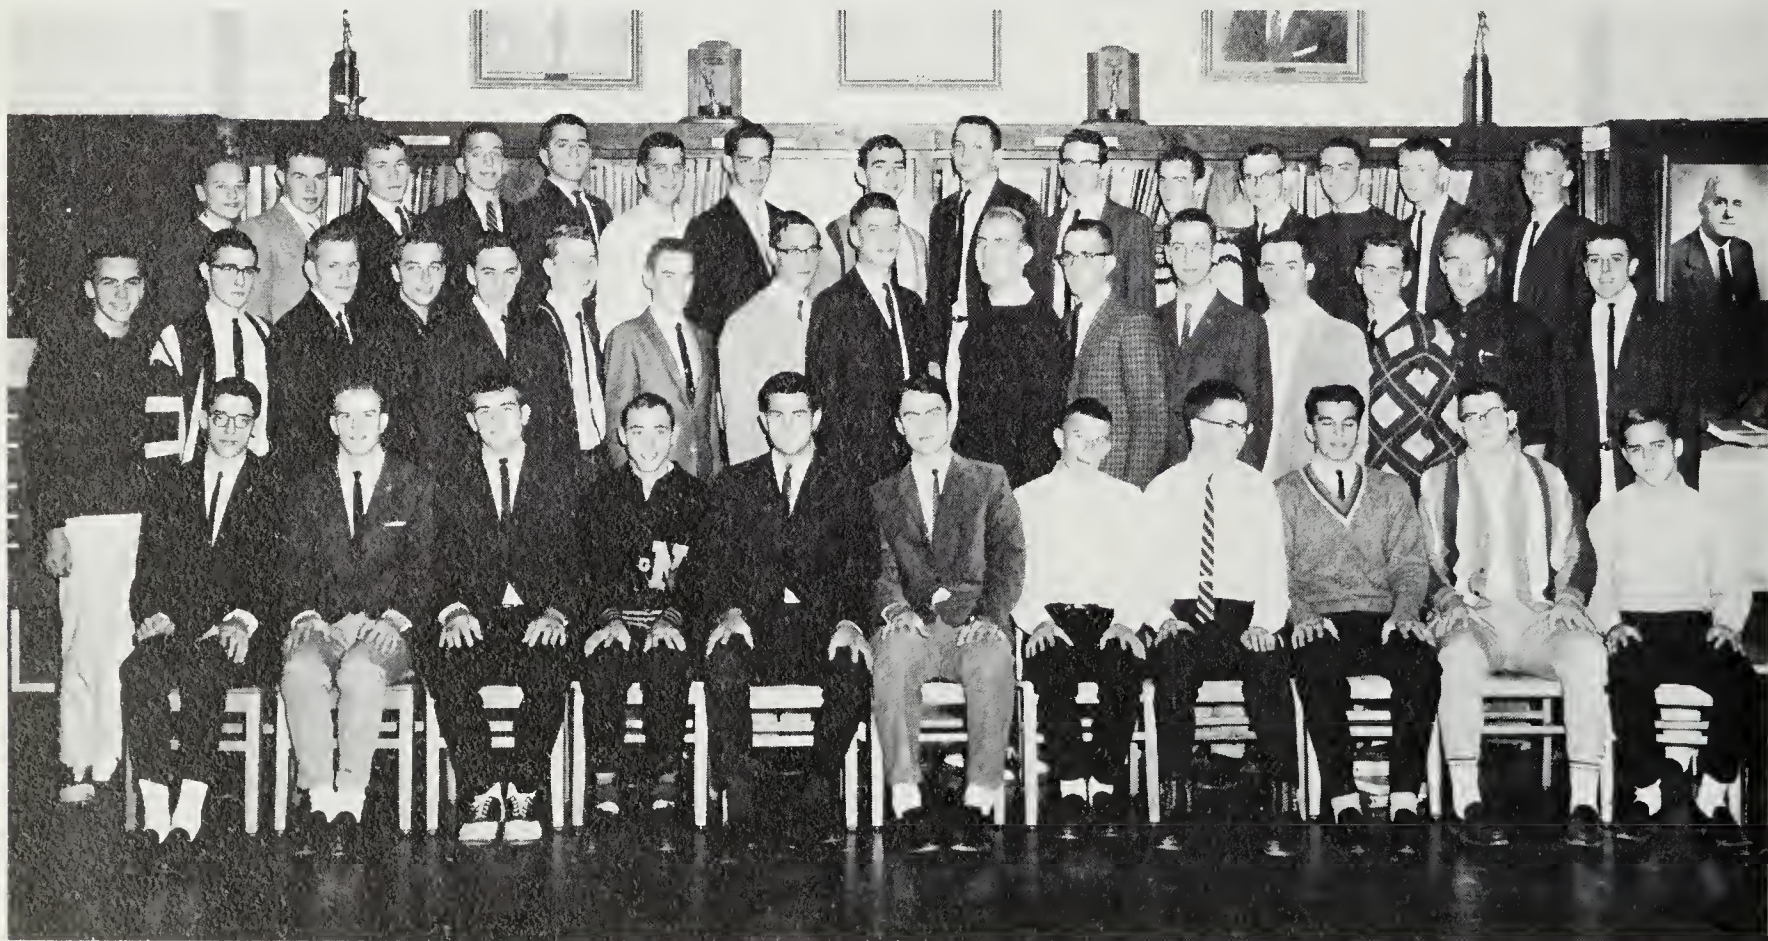

Key Club sponsored exchange student, Gustavo Mejia, discusses golf problems with Bob Barnes and his American brother, Mike Harris.

Jack Rust displays the look that won him the title of the "Ugliest Boy" in Fairfax High as he is crowned at a party in his honor.

This year the Key Club expanded its membership to include over fifty boys who worked diligently on service projects ranging from selling light bulbs and shoveling snow, to working in Cerebral Palsy and Tuberculosis centers. The Ugly Boy contest, won by Jack Rust, raised much of the money needed to support the American Field Service exchange student program. The founding of the Woodson High School Key Club was another one of the many outstanding contributions made by the Key Club to the school and the community.

Exchange Student

"Well, we don't do the same things on dates as you do," explains Gus.

Gus participates in gym class tumbling stunts with grace and ease?

This year our exchange student, sponsored by the American Field Service, and living with senior Mike Harris, was Gustavo Mejia from Columbia, South America. Gus, as he was known to everyone, was the school's first exchange student from a Spanish-speaking country. From him we were able to learn more about Spanish and Colombian customs and traditions. Although at first our ways seemed a little strange to him, he was soon taking part in many extra-curricular activities, and his face became familiar at school games and dances. During an assembly, Gus spoke to the student body about the differences between his country and ours. If the experience of visiting Fairfax was as beneficial for Gus as it was for the school, the Exchange Student Program was an outstanding success.

During the AFS assembly Gus spoke about his country along with other speakers, Irene Gilgoff, Fairfax's first "American Abroad," and two students from Malaya and Iran.

This year, with a membership of more than fifty girls, the Keyettes engaged in more activities than ever before. After the first club project, the Pizza Party, which occurred during the first week of school, the members plunged energetically into a series of important and worthwhile endeavors. The girls contributed to the Welfare Drive, went Christmas caroling with the Key Club, and organized the school directory. The most important project of the year was the sponsorship of the school's American Abroad student, Nancy Foster. At the national convention in Washington in February, the Keyettes enjoyed a weekend of fun, a well-earned reward for their service to the school.

Keyette members Lynne Binkley, Marni Foote, Kathy Mueller, and Irene Gilgoff work on their stuffed animals for the Welfare Assembly.

As their first project of the year, Fairfax Keyettes welcomed Gustavo to America at the airport.

Pep Club

Under the supervision of President Janet Beach, this year's Pep Club helped to unite the school through increased loyalty and support of the school's numerous athletic teams. They organized cavalcades, planned pep rallies, and hung good luck cards on player's lockers. They assisted the cheerleaders in publicizing games, painting signs and working on bulletin boards. All of these activities were directed toward giving recognition to the achievements of all FHS athletes. The Pep Club gained the respect of the teams and the student body. The members of the club, in addition to their organized support of athletics, were also the most loyal supporters at the games. In the spring, the club sponsored the Spring Swing, highlighted by the crowning of the May Queen. Only at the end of the year did the activities of this spirited organization end.

Pep Club Officers: Meredith Fischer, Kathy Hancock, Janet Beach, and Sponsor Miss Peters.

In the Spirit Week pep rally sponsored by the Pep Club, club members portray varsity football players and cheerleaders.

Club members work on signs for halls and lockers before the first basketball game.

Varsity Club

Varsity Club Officers: Bob Barnes, Roger Latham, Dale Weber, and Eric Magnusson. Missing is Ron Tankersley.

Working with the Booster's Club on worthwhile projects pertaining to sports, the Varsity Club endeavored to maintain enthusiasm in the major sports of football, basketball, and baseball, and to spark new interest in other sports such as wrestling, track, tennis, golf, and cross-country. Initiations, a terror to new members and a delight to old ones, were an additional highlight of the year. The members displayed the FHS letter, the reward for their active participation in varsity athletics. As the representatives of the outstanding athletes in the school, the Varsity Club tried to set a good example for aspiring varsity players among the younger classes.

Riding Club

The enthusiastic equestrians of the school found an outlet for their interests in the Riding Club. The club was not only devoted to riding, but also listened to speakers discussing such things as horses and riding equipment. Many afternoons were spent preparing for local horse shows or other competitive events, or simply riding for pleasure. Although the primary purpose of the club was the enjoyment of riding, the members increased their skills in riding and their knowledge of horses through their participation in the club.

Rebel Thrift Plan

In its third year of existence, the Rebel Thrift Plan served more students than in any previous year. The guidance of Miss Chinault, the program's sponsor, was the foundation for the plan's success. Those who benefited from its services were not only the students whose savings accrued dividends, but also students working in the bank who were able to gain practical experience while remaining in school. Their hard work as tellers and bookkeepers was as invaluable to them as it was to the rest of the school. The bank, an asset and a convenience to the students, was also a symbol of the goals attainable through careful planning.

Art Club

Under leadership of Linda Domscheit, the Art Club began the year with a reorganized club. Meeting every other week gave the members more time to work on their individual projects. The talents of the group were in constant demand throughout the school for bulletin boards, stage scenery, and other artistic work.

The club prepared the cafeteria bulletin board which always presented fresh and intriguing displays. The main project of the year was the Spring Exhibit, a presentation of the outstanding art work of the year.

Spanish Club

Although the Spanish Club was not formed until November, the members began working immediately to plan the projects of the year. With a goal of understanding Spanish cultures more completely, and of improving their knowledge of Spanish, the members organized committees to prepare various activities for the club. Such features as guest speakers and color films of tours through Latin American countries highlighted the meetings. These activities gave the club members a better understanding of the background of the Spanish people and helped them in their study of Spanish.

Latin Club

Early in the year the Latin Club formulated constructive ideas for various club activities. Under the sponsorship of Miss Kern, the club planned informative programs for the meetings. Many reports on Roman history were presented, including explanations of Roman customs and holidays. At a Christmas party the members sang holiday tunes in Latin and listened to a humorous explanation of Saturnalia, a Roman pagan holiday. During the year several plays, strictly for the club's enjoyment, were produced by the group's members.

For spring, the club planned a Roman banquet, complete with togas and a Roman meal on couches. The active participation of all the members in the group's projects made the year a great success for the club.

Latin Club Members and Officers: Dean Kidwell, Sponsor Miss Kern, Bonnie Biggs, and Roseanne Cawley.

French Club

French Club Officers: Gail Newman, Bobbie Jones, Sandy Joyner, and Kathy Mueller.

With many new members this year, the French Club was provided with new ideas for its activities. Enthusiasm and interest made the club one of the school's most active. Preparing for the traditional Christmas caroling party was the club's first major project. Later, guest lecturers spoke to the club about the customs and characteristics of this romantic country. Topics that were not covered in class were freely discussed in the club's meetings. Since only French was spoken during the meetings, members were able to improve their pronunciation and to expand their vocabularies. The members of the French Club broadened their knowledge of the French people and their country, and enjoyed themselves doing it.

U. N. Club

Knowledge and understanding of the functions of the United Nations was the primary goal of the U. N. Club. This objective was obtained through various activities. In addition to studying the U. N. itself, club members learned about customs and backgrounds of the nations comprising the U. N. Members gave reports to the club and viewed films on U. N. activities. Controversial subjects of foreign affairs were often debated at the meetings.

Plans for future activities included excursions to the foreign embassies in Washington D. C., and a trip to the U. N. building in New York. The club planned for a Spring International Dinner and a U. N. Gift Shop for the school's International Fair. The enthusiastic individual participation of the members was proof of the club's success in its aims.

The purpose of the Distributive Education Club was to help its members develop a respect for education in the fields of marketing and distribution. At monthly meetings, students made progress, reports to the club of their employments. Members found their jobs outside the school were not only beneficial from a financial standpoint, but helped them to improve their work habits and attitudes by making them more aware of the importance of their high school education. First semester earnings for the club totaled nearly $17,000., evidence that their work was well worthwhile.

D. O.

All the members of the Diversified Occupations Club studied the same program. They attended Industrial Cooperative Training class at the beginning of the day, followed by three required classes, before departing from school to their individual employments. The purpose of the D. O. Club was to promote the highest degree of individual achievement in I. C. T. program activities. One of the more important events for the club was the annual District Convention. The club also sponsored an Employer-Employee Banquet to which the club members invited their employers. The club's regular program consisted of a business meeting followed by a social activity. Thus the club provided not only a forum for discussion of mutual business interests, but also a social outlet for its members.

Monitors

Monitors, kneeling: Bob Sullivan, Gordon Hobgood, Bill Howery. Standing: Fay Pearson, Carl Ishoy, Ike Howard, John

Luray, Pat Hurley, Keith Kinne, Linda Haun, Alan Beard, Beverly Jacobs, Beegee McKeithan, Nancy Shaffer.

The monitors had the difficult and often thankless job of maintaining order in the halls on lunch periods and of enforcing all of the school's regulations. The group sought to do this, not by military regulation of the students, but by encouraging proper conduct on the initiative of each individual. To do this, the monitors tried to set a good example themselves and called upon the rest of the school to follow it. By fostering increased awareness of the Honor Code, the Monitors were able to improve the problems of conduct within the school.

F. H. A.

During 1962-1963 the members of the Future Homemakers of America learned more about homemaking while serving the school in club projects. The sponsorship of the Red Cross Drive was the greatest service the club performed for the school. In addition to learning more about homemaking in the monthly meetings, the members planned the club's social events, chief of which was the annual Mother-Daughter Banquet. In these activities and in the learning and practice of the tasks involved in caring for a home, the club's members spent many enjoyable and rewarding hours.

ACADEMICS

The year 1962-1963 was one of adjustment, since over half of our faculty members were new to Fairfax. However, the problems were quickly overshadowed by the faculty's enthusiasm for its role. The initial strangeness was followed by a growing respect and admiration as the new teachers took their places, both as instructors and as advisors, and many new friendships arose between students and teachers. The new teachers, and the returning faculty members, shared our problems and joined our fun, guided our education and supported our activities. They stood ready with a word of encouragement or advice when needed, and always placed before us high goals and ideals. They became an important factor in shaping the course of our lives; they looked to the future when our minds lingered on the present. Their guidance and instruction has prepared us for the future when we will assume our roles as responsible, educated citizens.

Administration

Cyrus Doub
Principal

The administration is the guiding force which makes Fairfax High School the institution it is. More than any other group within the school, the administrators are responsible for the atmosphere of freedom and learning so essential to F.H.S. Their duties range from policy making to the supervision of the faculty, and from organization of schedules, to disciplining of students. Although they are occasionally the target of disgruntled student criticism, the administration always keeps the interests of the students first in its consideration. It is these administrators who maintain the basic ideal of American education—equal opportunity for all—as the governing principle for education at F.H.S.

Guidance

Guidance Office Secretaries, Mrs. Willie Davis, Mrs. Billye Lubin, and Mrs. Jean Magnusson.

Mr. Dungan and Mrs. Switzer check student grades before making out transcripts.

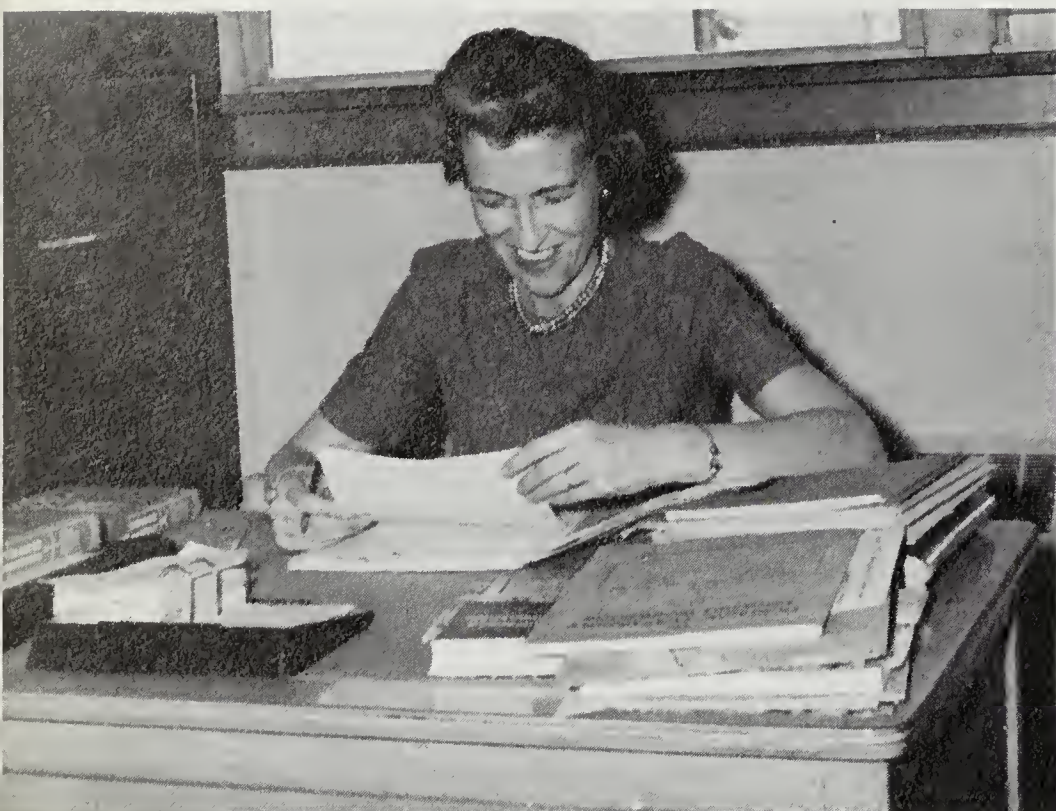

The Guidance Office is an important part of the Administration. Its main function is to help the students in any way possible, and full-time counselors are always ready to give assistance and practical advice when needed. The courses a student takes are extremely important and the Guidance Counselors help each student work out the course of study suited to his individual needs. Tests are also important, and each year the Guidance Office supervises College Board Examinations, Merit Scholarship Tests, and many others. To graduating seniors, the Guidance Office assumes an even greater importance, for it advises them in their choice of colleges or jobs. It handles much of the work of college applications and also helps non-college-bound seniors to find permanent employment.

In keeping with the demands of educators throughout the United States, the importance of English is stressed at Fairfax High School. Freshmen and sophomores are taught grammar and general literature as a foundation for more specialized studies of American and English literature in the junior and senior years. In all courses, the accent is on writing and usage rather than memorization of rules. In addition to the basic four-year program, FHS offers many elective courses designed to enrich the program of interested students. Courses in journalism, public speaking, creative writing, and dramatics are open to juniors and seniors. Also sponsored by the English Department are forensic contests in prose and poetry reading and public speaking. These contests, conducted by grades, help students learn to communicate effectively and lead some students to statewide competition.

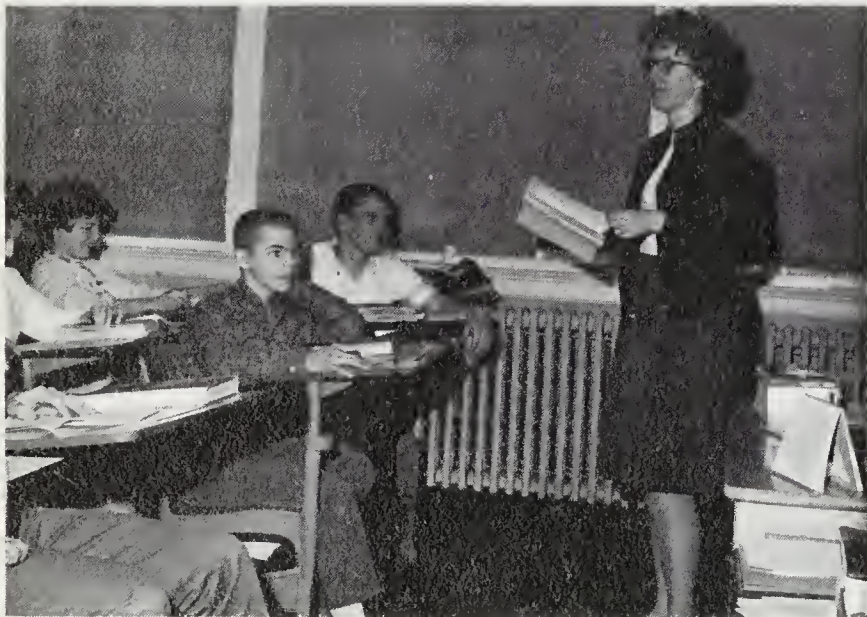

Mr. Smith, new faculty member, gets a warm welcome from Dan McCormack and other students in his public speaking class.

Mrs. Mosser catches Steve Hitchcock trying to fake his homework in his workbook again.

Foreign Languages

Mr. Dunn explains to his students the value of recording their French Christmas carols as Ray Diamant waits to talk to him.

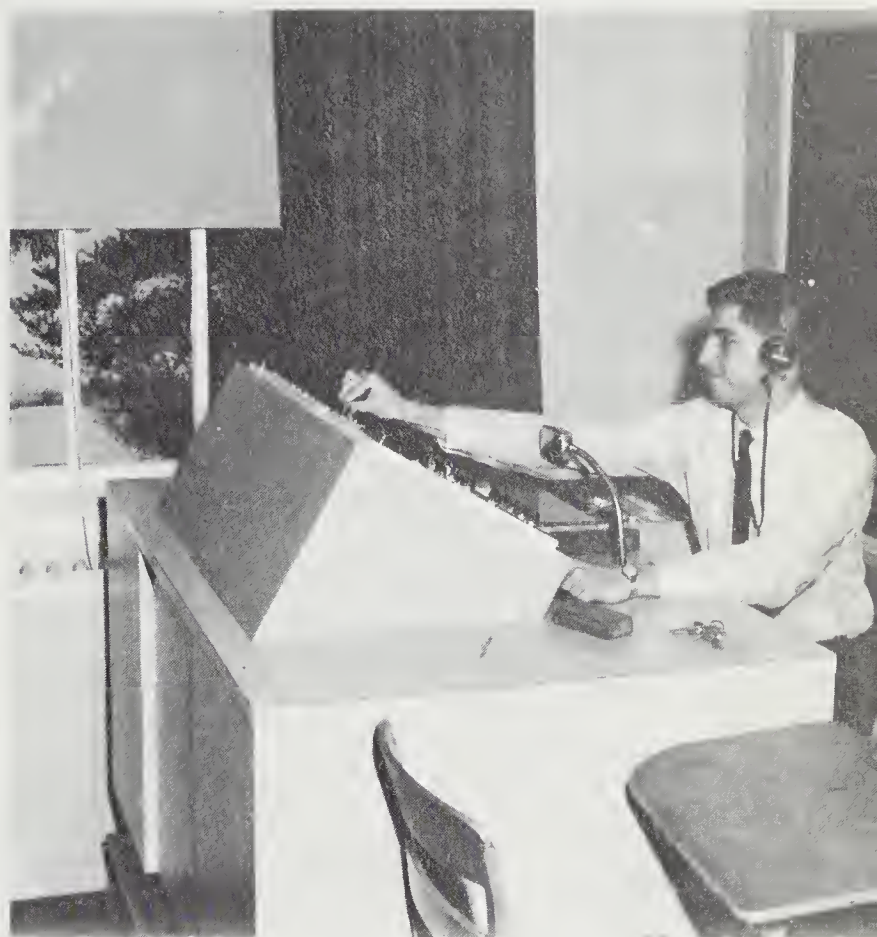

Miss Dennett points out some places of interest in downtown Madrid to an interested Bob Marsh.

F.H.S. offers a complete and expanding instructional program in French, Spanish, and Latin. Four years of study are available in each language, and this year a fifth year of French was added for interested students. The first two years of instruction strive chiefly to impart an understanding of the spoken and printed language. As the students progress, the emphasis is placed more upon writing, translating, and speaking the language. Language teaching is invaluable assisted by many new and modern mechanical aids, including tape recordings and the language laboratory.

"Atención amigos—non s'habla Ingles aqui," says Miss Wilburn to her class as she goes through the day's lesson plans.

Mr. Garner adjusts his cogwheel models after a class demonstration.

Lab assistants, Tom Hoffmann, Jerry Baggs, and Marcia Cleveland making their own brew in the back room.

The student at Fairfax may choose his courses from a diverse and complete science curriculum. Freshmen may take either general science or earth science, studying such interesting topics as rocks, fossils, and the composition of volcanoes. With the introduction of the new laboratory biology course this year, students were able to gain a greater knowledge of dissection and the use of the microscope. Chemistry students, greatly aided by a modern laboratory, obtained a sound understanding of chemical theory which builds a strong foundation for future study. Physics is a survey of the principles of heat, light, sound, mechanics, and nuclear physics. Other aids to the science program at F.H.S. are the Biology and Senior Science Clubs which help to foster interest in science by sponsoring the school's science fair. The fair gives students the opportunity to apply their knowledge in fields which interest them as well as providing an avenue to state and national competition for scholarships and prizes.

Math

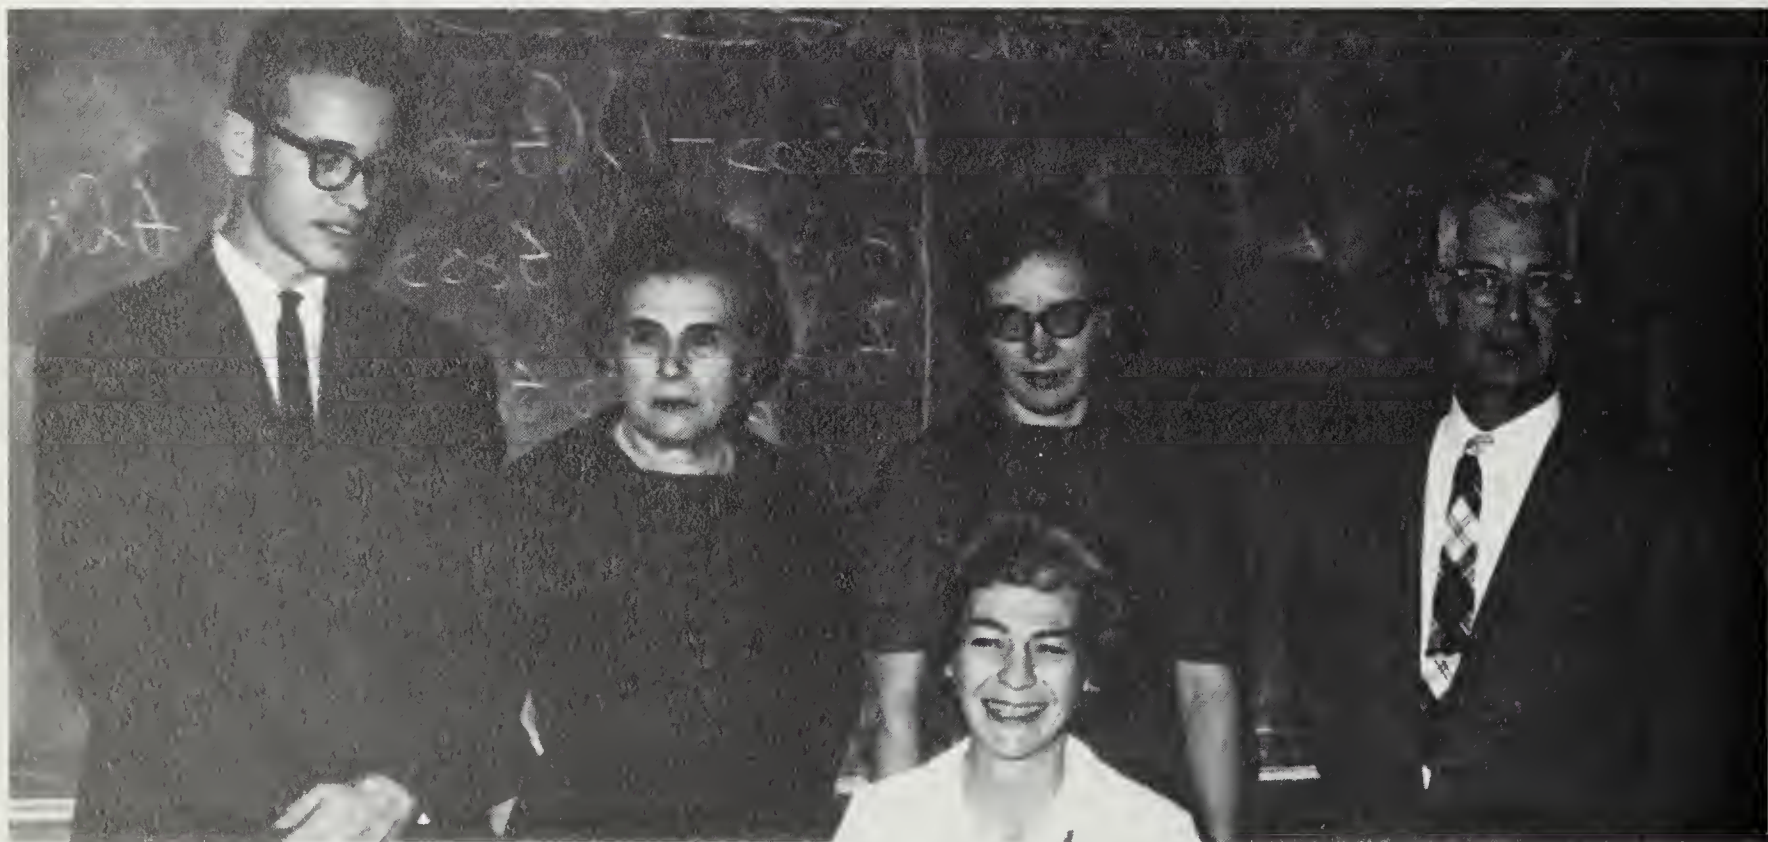

Mathematics Department teachers: Mr. James Reid, Mrs. Madeline Talmadge, Mr. John Cassidy.

"Mac, come correct this awful mess," Mrs. Talmadge calls as she hands back a test paper.

The Math Department is designed to meet the needs of every student. For those who do not wish to take a great deal of math, Algebra I and II and Plane Geometry are offered. Those who wish to pursue mathematics more deeply may take courses combining solid geometry and trigonometry or advanced algebra and analysis. For business students there are courses in general math and business math, in which the principles of practical arithmetic and banking are taught. Students can thus prepare themselves either for an immediate job or for a future education. The flexibility of the program and the efforts of math teachers to make their subject dynamic and stimulating make math more interesting for everyone.

Miss Hughes and Cindy Davis get together and try to figure out a problem on the board.

Social Studies

Miss Story, Department Chairman, explains some of the "little known facts" of the American Revolution.

Mr. Ferguson's day doesn't end at 3:30. Along with many other faculty members, he is active in sponsoring extra-curricular activities such as Varsity Basketball and the Senior Class.

Social Studies is, in many ways, the most vital area of study at Fairfax High School. With the world situation becoming more and more important to every individual, the knowledge of world history and American history, which form the background for current happenings, assumes a greater significance. Economics and sociology, offered to seniors, provide a general outline of the American economic system, and follows the current patterns in relation to world trends. Offered only to seniors, American Government, is necessary to every citizen's understanding of democracy. Geography, usually an underclassman's course, acquaints students with important facts about the many countries studied. Social studies gives students a broad background to help them better understand the world today.

Hope Strong grabs Miss Beardmore and prepares to carry her off in a last effort to prevent the government test.

Mrs. Offield, Department Chairman, runs off a set of stencils on the new duplicator machine.

Mr. Jennings Wilson and Mr. John McAteer, D. E. and D. O. coordinators.

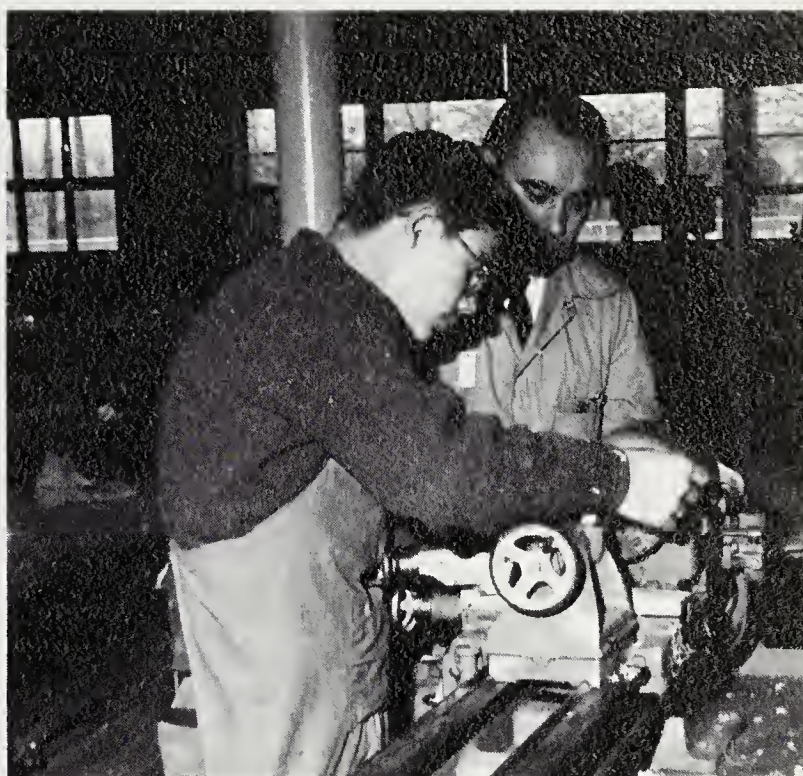

Besides the usual academic course offerings designed to prepare students for college, F.H.S. offers a complete course of instruction for the student interested in an immediate vocation in the business world. Business Education courses range from elementary typing to advanced bookkeeping. Also offered are courses covering principles of business, including the mechanics of advertising, selling and manufacturing. Through the Distributive Education and Diversified Occupation programs, students may combine morning classroom education with afternoon jobs utilizing their training. This unique program gives students the chance to obtain a complete high school education while earning money and preparing themselves for a life vocation.

Home Economics and Industrial Arts

Mrs. Sheila Sullivan, Home Economics Department Chairman.

In the Home Economics and Industrial Arts sections of the school, students are given the opportunity to acquire skills which can not be learned in the classroom. In Home Economics girls learn the fundamentals of housekeeping, cooking, and budgeting family expenses. Shop students may choose from a number of courses ranging from metal or wood shop to mechanical drawing. Both departments give students the chance for practical training useful for the future. Whether these courses form the basis for a vocation, or simply enrich a student's education, they are invaluable practical experience.

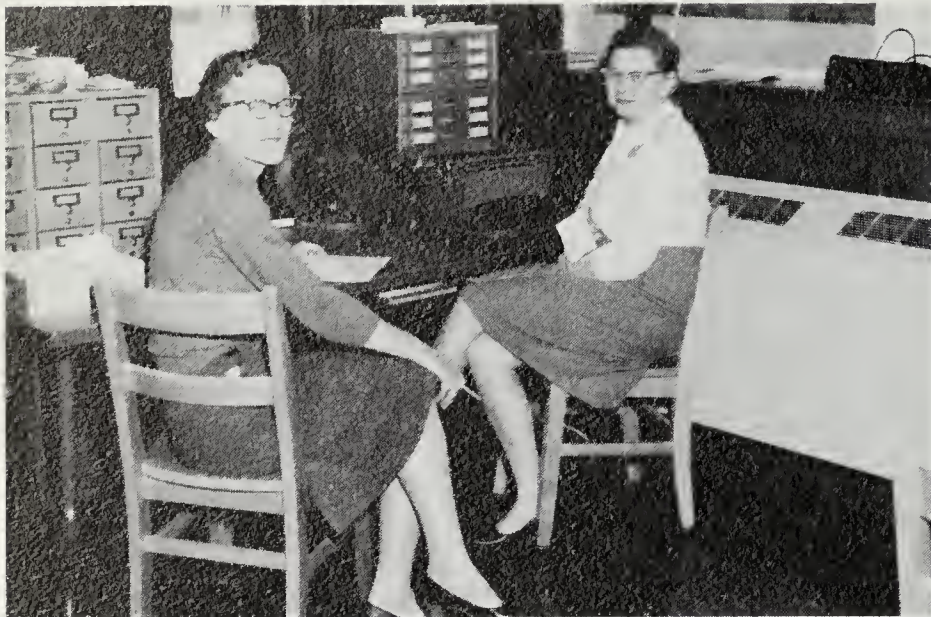

Mr. Renick instructs a student on how not to chop off a finger.

Library

Miss Virginia Stanley, head librarian, and Mrs. Anne Gilgoff, a library volunteer worker.

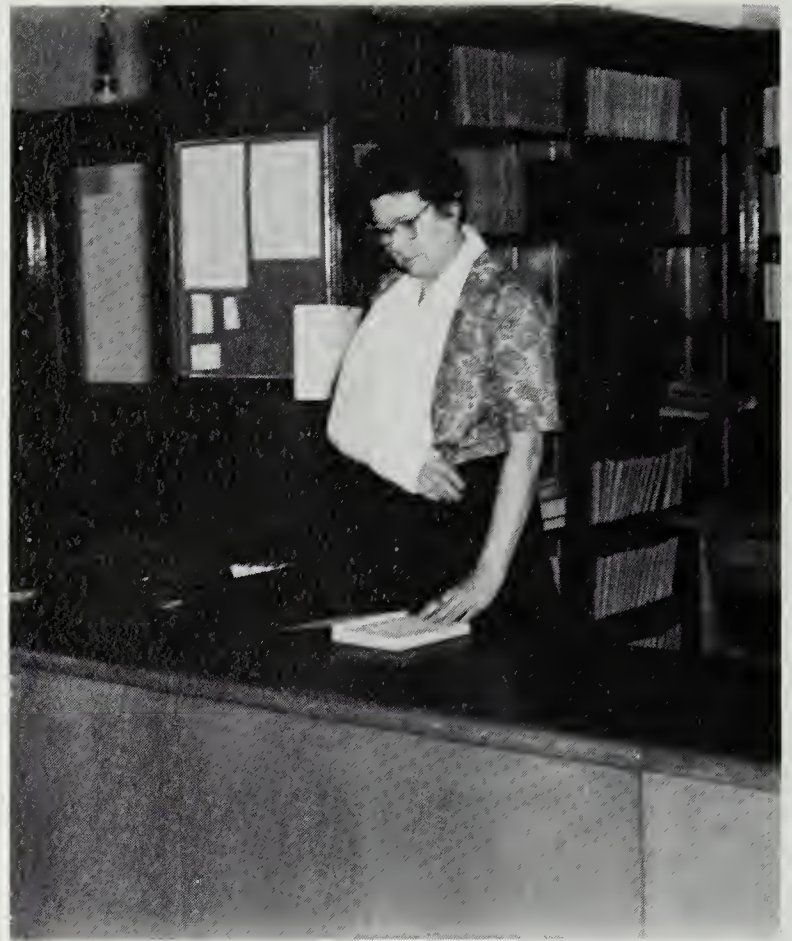

Often overlooked, as simply the custodians of our library facilities, the librarians are constantly striving to improve the library by adding new volumes and repairing old ones. This year our research was made easier by the addition of books in the biography and reference sections. Fiction too, was bolstered with many new works by well-known authors. The hours spent studying, researching, or simply reading for pleasure, were more fruitful and more enjoyable because of these improvements.

Secretaries

Some of the most important but least recognized faculty members in the school are our secretaries. Their work seems insignificant to us when we think only of asking for a tardy pass or buying notebook paper, but actually their duties are far more numerous than we realize. In literally hundreds of jobs ranging from balancing the school's budget to answering the telephone, these secretaries keep the school running smoothly and efficiently.

Miss Virginia Organ, assistant librarian.

Mrs. Moore goes over financial problems with a frequent visitor, Eric Magnusson, treasurer of the Key Club.

Art

Miss Linda Gonzales, student teacher.

Miss Sandra Dodson and Miss Nellie Marshall, Department Chairmen.

Four years of art instruction are offered at Fairfax, beginning with basic skills and techniques in the first year and later progressing to advanced work in many specialized fields. Students are encouraged to develop their creative skills in whatever field they are most interested in. In addition to classroom study, many students employ their talents making bulletin boards and posters, and painting stage scenery. Art instruction, often considered a "frill" by conservative educators, gives students a chance to recognize individually their creative abilities.

Physical education for girls is less strenuous than for boys but is equally important. Girls learn folk dancing and driver training, in addition to sports such as tennis, archery, basketball and softball. Varsity coaches watch closely as their classes begin basketball and softball, hoping to find prospects for their teams. Besides sports, girls take courses in health and first aid, as well as in the basic fundamentals of posture, poise and good grooming. Girls' physical education classes succeed in developing healthy bodies and better attitudes through team sports and classroom study.

The development of a sound body to complement a sound mind is the aim of the physical education teachers. By giving students the chance to participate equally in games, and by fostering competition and sportsmanship, physical education creates better-rounded citizens. Boys' classes cover almost every sport, including touch football, basketball, wrestling, tumbling and softball. Students also participate in classroom sections devoted to health and first aid. Through physical education classes, students are able to take a course in driver education, preparation for behind-the-wheel training. Physical education provides a break in the daily classroom routine and leaves students refreshed to return to classes.

Mr. Peterson explains to Mr. Claypool how Eddie Lonergan has been absent from gym class for the last 23 days.

Mr. Stalnaker, Director of Athletics, plans the schedule for the football season.

Cafeteria

row: Mrs. I. Brittingham, Mrs. M. Fisher, Mrs. I. Mauck, Mrs. M. Dove, Mrs. B. Larimer, Mrs. E. Smith.

Most of us do not recognize the invaluable services performed by the cafeteria workers for the students. The hours of preparation and planning which go into each meal are often forgotten as hungry Rebels sit down to lunch. Mrs. Dove's job is one of constant arbitration in trying to satisfy everyone's wishes.

Working with a limited budget and a few federal surplus foods, she must satisfy state diet requirement while trying to please students. Despite these difficulties, the meals are always varied and nutritious, as proved by the many compliments of new teachers and visitors.

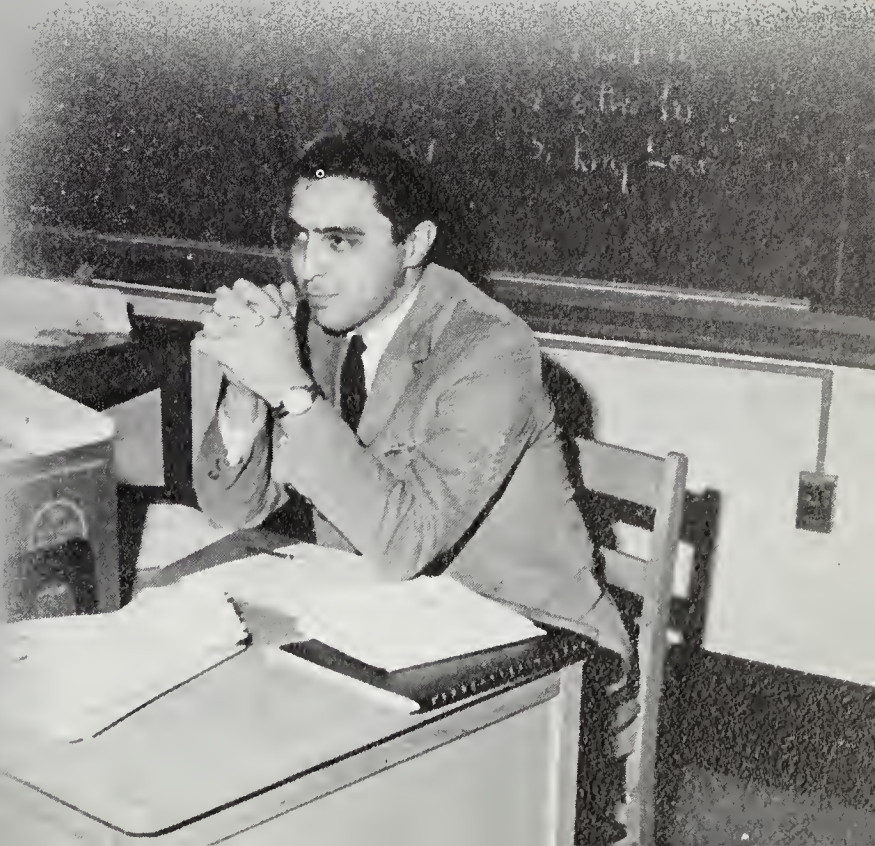

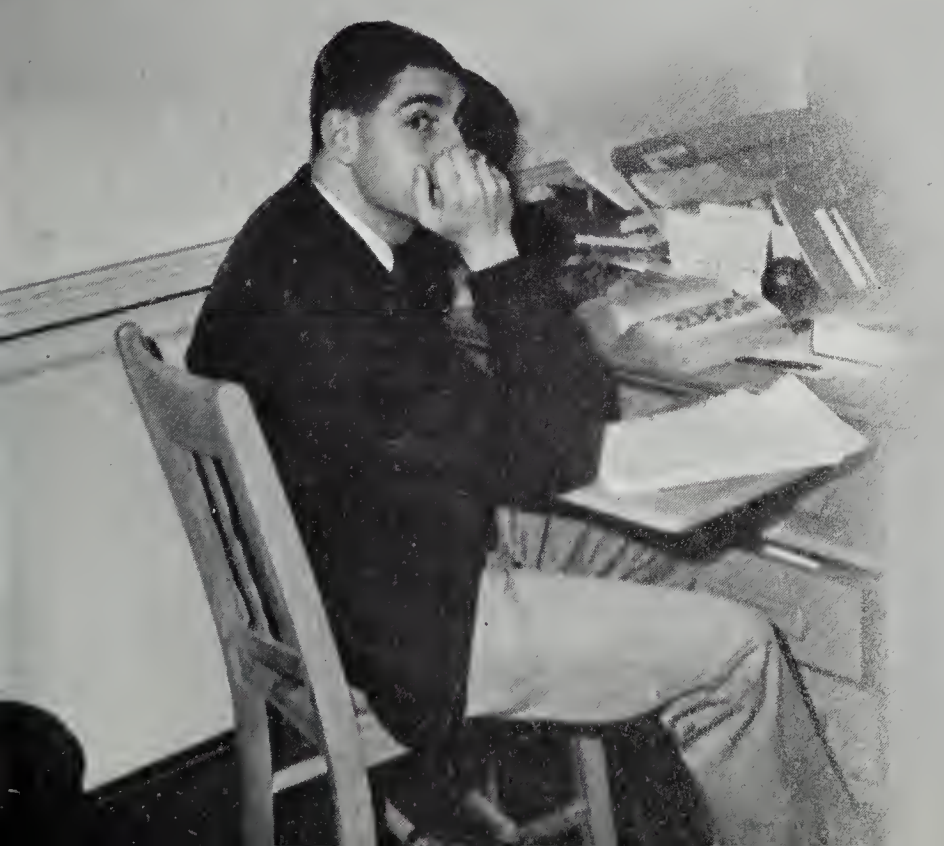

Custodians

Although we may only notice them sweeping sawdust in the halls or mopping floors in the afternoon, the custodians have many more duties than these. Mowing lawns, trimming hedges, polishing floors, emptying trash baskets—their work seems endless. The neat, well-kept appearance of the school is due totally to their efforts. Shining floors and clean blackboards are the obvious results of their labor, but much of their work goes unnoticed, as stacked chairs in the cafeteria, straightened desks in classrooms, and clean restrooms. Although their work may be unappreciated at times, they render an important service to the school.

CLASSES

As individuals we were as different as is possible: credulous Freshmen and cynical upperclassmen, ninety-five pound wrestlers and 250 pound football players, diligent workers and "just-get-by" loafers. Within Fairfax High, however, we were united in common endeavors and loyalties. Whether in Student Government projects, or struggling through English or math courses, the spirit of friendship and companionship bonded us together. Spurred by friendly inter-class competition, we strove to make a name for our class. We cheered our athletic teams, brought in canned food for the welfare drive, and sold magazines. At the lunch table we consoled each other over long homework assignments and parental restrictions. Tests, from SCAT and STEP to PSAT and College Boards, were an experience common to us all. The knowledge we acquired in the classroom was only part of our education. The experiences we gained learning and working together taught us an invaluable lesson in human relationships which will be useful in the future no matter what course we may follow.

FRESHMEN

We had felt so grown up at the thought of entering high school for the first time. But when the actual moment came, our confidence fled, and we felt lost and overwhelmed. Within a few weeks, however, this outside-looking-in feeling began to fade as we became familiar with our surroundings. We began to take part in the school's activities and to make new friends within our own class. Although we often felt ignored by the rest of the school, we enjoyed our own activities and athletic teams. These activities united us as a class and prepared us for the future in which we would become the leaders of the school. Our role in school activities this year was mostly as observers. Our eyes were on the years ahead—the football seasons, the class plays, the senior privileges. For us, the year was one of experimentation and expectation. With the future in which to prove ourselves, we looked forward with hope and confidence to the three years ahead.

SOPHOMORES

As Freshmen, we had been a group of individuals to whom "The Class of '65" had been no more than a designation of the year in which we would graduate. At the year's beginning, however, this name acquired new significance for us as we energetically threw ourselves into our first class project, the Homecoming float. Our hard work was well rewarded when we won second place. As the year continued, we felt new pride in our class as we watched our members distinguish themselves on Varsity and Junior Varsity athletic teams. This new pride showed itself in our efforts to raise money for our class treasury through car washes and bake sales. The "best ever" became our goal in our projects throughout the year. We put on the Court Caper Dance, challenged the Seniors in basketball, and finally decorated for graduation. At the year's end, we could look back on the successes of the year, and forward to the responsibilities and excitement we would encounter as upperclassmen.

JUNIORS

Although we had adopted the name of Juniors the previous June, it took almost a month of school before we could fully accept our position as upperclassmen. The many school activities in which we engaged crowded our schedule, but we were still able to find time for class activities. Fall money-raising projects and decorations for the Homecoming float gave way in November to hurried preparations for the play, More Than Meets the Eye. Our unceasing efforts made it an outstanding financial and dramatic success. In February, to raise money for the prom, we sold ourselves as slaves for a day to the rest of the school. The preparations for the prom, which had been continuing since January, became obvious by May, as Juniors hurried around frantically trying to finish decorating and setting up. At last the dance was over and the year was at an end. For the successes of the year there were pleasant memories, for its few failures, there was next year in which to improve.

SENIORS

Our senior year was one of excitement and mixed emotions. We felt a certain detachment from high school and yet a reluctance to leave it. Although we were the leaders of the school, the glory of these positions was somehow diminished by their reality, and their drudgery and responsibility seemed to overshadow the admiration we felt from the underclassmen. As a class we could look back on past achievements and be justly proud of our record. We remembered winning class floats, a record-breaking Junior Play, the Prom, our victory in the magazine drive, the final success of "Bye Bye Birdie." We could recall our individual high school careers, good times and hard tests, petty worries and worthwhile achievements. But even as we looked back nostalgically, thoughts of the future crowded our minds. We realized that with graduation, a major milestone in our lives was past. A part of our life and our childhood was gone forever. The decisions we were faced with would have a great effect on our lives, yet we were anxious to meet the future, for each of us in his own way was out to conquer the world.
